

PARTS OF A SENTENCE

www.englishwithashish.com

A sentence is a combination of two things: 1) Subject 2) Predicate

SUBJECT

It is something or somebody that a sentence focuses on. It is either a person who does an action in the sentence or a person or thing that the sentence gives information about (description).

Examples:

1. Ron dances. (the subject performs the action here)
2. She sings. (the subject performs the action here)
3. Rahul is my English teacher. (Telling what the subject is)
4. Your brother is talented. (Describing the subject with an adjective).

PREDICATE

A predicate is a part of the sentence that gives information about the subject. It either indicates what the subject is doing or gives information about the subject in terms of giving it a name (using a noun) or modifying it (using an adjective).

Here are the basic things we have in a predicate:

- Verb or verb phrase
- Object (direct and indirect)
- Subject complement
- Object complement

SENTENCES (Different possibilities)

1. Subject + predicate (verb)

- I cry.
- She slept.
- Your friends have slept.

2. Subject + predicate (verb + object)

- I have a lot of money.
- We need your support.

NOTE: some verbs take objects in order to render a proper meaning and make the sentence grammatical. These sentences are incomplete without the objects.

3. Subject + predicate (linking verb + subject complement)

- My father is an accountant.
- His journey has been very difficult.

My father = an accountant.
His journey = very difficult.

These sentences are incomplete without the subject complement. The subject complement is an indispensable part of the sentence.

3. Subject + predicate (verb + object + object complement)

- My friends call me a genius. (call me what = a genius)
- You made Ashish upset. (made him what = upset)

These sentences are incomplete without the object complement. Here, the verbs have a different meaning from they usually mean.
