Purpose Of Forests:

The Purposes of the National Forests Norman I. Wengert, A. A. Dyer, 1979 The protective functions of forests in a changing climate - European experience Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2021-10-13

The objective of this publication is to present the policy and management approach of each member country on its protective forests. The goal of the member countries is to increase the resilience of mountain forests and ensure the sustainability of their protective functions for society. Each country report covers the following topics: 1 definition of protective forests, 2 characteristics of the national protective forest system, 3 challenges encountered in the management and strengthening of protective forests including climate change impacts, 4 governance of the protective forest system and 5 monitoring and planning systems for protective forests. Countries have defined, characterized and identified challenges inherent to their protective forests and it is through their appropriate governance, management and planning that the forests are able to provide ecosystem services in a sustainable way. In the context of a changing climate, the approach has to be revisited and adapted to novel and increasingly more uncertain conditions. This review of reports from 12 countries shows that especially mountain regions in Europe are facing common challenges and that different approaches can be learnt from each other. We hope that this report may provide a basis for further actions in transboundary and international cooperation for maintaining and enhancing protective forests.

The distribution of powers and responsibilities affecting forests, land use, and REDD+ across levels and sectors in Vietnam: A legal study Le Quang Trung, Vu Tan Phuong, Anastasia Yang, Vo Dai Hai, 2015-10-27

What are the roles and responsibilities of different levels of government over forests and land use in Vietnam? Over the last two decades, how have government priorities shifted? How has decentralisation been realised through changing land laws and forest protection and development programs? Which powers and responsibilities are centralized and which are decentralized? What role do local people play? This report reviews the statutory distribution of powers and responsibilities across levels and sectors. It outlines the legal mandates held by national and lower level governments with regard to land and forest allocation, afforestation programs, rubber plantations, Payments for Forest Environmental Services (PFES), land use planning and more. The review considers legal and policy changes in land use and forestry in Vietnam following the doi moi reform in 1986 up to 2014. After a short introduction, the second section describes the decentralization process including mechanisms for participation. The third section outlines sources of revenue available to different government levels from forest fees and payments for environmental services. The fourth section details the specific distribution of powers and arenas of responsibility related to multiple land use sectors across and within levels and the fifth and final section concludes on the policy changes and processes in relation to observed forest cover change. The study was commissioned under CIFOR's Global Comparative Study on REDD as part of a research project on multilevel governance and carbon management at the landscape scale. It is intended as a reference for researchers and policy makers working on land use issues in Vietnam.
