Telehealth, Telemedicine or Electronic Health Simplified: Dr. Joan Emeli-Komolafe,2014-06-05 As we continue to debate the issues of health care in our nation I began to explore some of the very funny moments I observed and not so funny consequences of the drama that is unfolding and is being played out on our national televisions our political capital our streets our homes and by our politicians and our citizens Names and identities are often given for a reason Without a name or identity we are all beings roaming this earth Let s imagine for a moment a world where no names or identities are attached to anything Imagine waking up and all your family members friends pets things etc have no names no identity Imagine how chaotic your day would start off You walk into a hospital full of patients with no identities no names a nursery full of newborns with no names no identities a home care setting full of home care patients with no names no identities I am sure that you are getting the drift by now Yes chaos would ensue to say the least Now you get the gist as to why we are so attached to the idea of names and identities Yes we name and identify people and things for a reason Identities are given to people and things for a very good reason Depending on your culture there are also meanings attached to naming and identifying people and things Some cultures observe a child and choose a name that suits that child s personality When Kate the Duchess of England and Prince William named their newborn child George the III it was suggested that the name was chosen due to several reasons as reported below The Lawyers Reports Annotated, Book 1-70 ,1903 The Medical Brief ,1915
