Narrative in Health Care John D Engel, Joseph Zarconi, Lura Pethtel, Sally Missimi, 2017-11-22 Narrative medicine has developed an identity already Clinicians of many disciplines are being summoned to a practice that recognizes patients by receiving their accounts of self Starting from different positions the four authors have converged in a strong and shared commitment to narrative health care They conceptualize narrative health care practices within frameworks derived from the social sciences and psychology and to a lesser degree phenomenology and autobiographical theory They relate the development of narrative medicine to relationship centered care patient centered care and complex responsive process of relating theory positing that narrative medicine can help clinicians to develop the skills required to practice relationship centered care The book details with exercises resource texts and abundant scholarly apparatus how these skills can be developed and strengthened This work will change health care Because of its scholarly rigor its multi voiced sources and its highly practical features lists activities key ideas and key references primary texts written by health care professionals and patients this work will be a guide in the field for those who practice medicine or nursing or social work The book establishes that there is a field to be practised a need to practise it and a means to develop the wherewithal to do so How to Do Things with Narrative Jan Alber, Greta Olson, 2017-11-20 This volume combines narratological analyses with an investigation of the ideological ramifications of the use of narrative strategies The collected essays do not posit any intrinsic or stable connection between narrative techniques and world views Rather they demonstrate that world views are inevitably expressed through highly specific formal strategies This insight leads the contributors to investigate why and how particular narrative techniques are employed and under what conditions

Reframing Disability and Quality of Life Narelle Warren, Lenore Manderson, 2013-03-12 This volume brings together two parallel fields of interest One is the understanding among psychologists and other social scientists of the limits to psychometric measurement and the challenges in generating information about quality of life and wellbeing that enable comparison across time and place at both individual and population levels The second is the interest among anthropologists and others in the lived experience of chronic illness and disability including the unpredictable fluctuations in perceived health and capability Chronic conditions and physical impairments are assumed to impact negatively on people's quality of life affecting them psychologically socially and economically While some of these conditions have declined in prevalence as a result of prenatal diagnosis early successful interventions and changes in medical technology and surgery many of these conditions are on the increase as a consequence of improved life saving medication and technology and greater longevity Quality of life is often used as an indicator for successful and high quality health services and good access to medical attention and surgery for hip replacements or laser surgery to improve vision for instance But it is also used as an argument against interventions when such interventions are seen to prolong life for its own sake Yet we also know that people vary their idea of quality as a result of the context of fluctuations in their own health status the presence or absence of pain or discomfort and as a result of variations in social and economic contextual factors In exploring these questions this volume contributes to emerging debates related to individual health outcomes but also to the social and other individual determinants that influence everyday life Understanding these broader contextual factors will contribute to our knowledge of the kinds of services support systems and infrastructure that provide people with good quality of life and a sense of wellbeing regardless of their physical health capability and functioning The volume includes scholars from all continents who have been encouraged to think critically and to engage with the descriptive methodological social policy and clinical implications of their work and the Healing Ritual in Western Medicine James Meza, 2018-07-17 The dominance of illness narratives in narrative healing studies has tended to mean that the focus centers around the healing of the individual Meza proposes that this emphasis is misplaced and the true focus of cultural healing should lie in managing the disruption of disease and death cultural or biological to the individual's relationship with society By explicating narrative theory through the lens of cognitive anthropology Meza reframes the epistemology of narrative and healing moving it from relativism to a philosophical perspective of pragmatic realism Using a novel combination of narrative theory and cognitive anthropology to represent the ethnographic data Meza's ethnography is a valuable contribution in a field where ethnographic records related to medical clinical encounters are scarce The book will be of interest to scholars of medical anthropology and those interested in narrative history and narrative medicine

Institutionalizing Illness Narratives Mathew George, 2016-08-01 This book is an ethnographic work that uses a critical medical anthropology approach to examine the concept of fever care in the context of southern India Through a study of fevers the study provides a critical overview to medical practice itself as it is said that the history of fevers is also the history of medicine This association between fevers and medicine is as relevant today as this in depth study of fever care reveals Acknowledging the central role of health institutions in creating and propagating notions about illness in society the author examines fever care through a study of hospitals The study examines various discourses on fevers prevalent in the southern state of Kerala which influence policy and programmatic dimensions of the state health services system Fever care implies those aspects related to provisioning and cost involved among public and private sector hospitals A second and more important dimension of this book is a critique of the culture of biomedical practice informed by the social constructivist framework and approaches in the field of science studies Overall the book studies the processes by which physical symptoms like fever are treated as epidemics to be controlled and are therefore brought within a biomedical system thereby opening up options for commercialization of care
