A Practical Research Process for Developing a Sustainable Built Environment in Emerging Economies Andrew Ebekozen, Clinton Ohi, Aigbavboa, Wellington Didibhuku Thwala, 2025-02-19. A Practical Research Process for Developing a Sustainable Built Environment in Emerging Economies aims to fill the dearth of practical research guidance and reference material with specific focus on the built environment in developing countries. Global policy agendas such as Agenda 2030, the SDGs highlight the importance and growth of research and knowledge from emerging nations who are increasingly contributing to research that is critical for development and advancement. The role of built environment practitioners will continue to evolve by building on the sound foundations laid down by the professions and by exploiting to the full the new technologies available to us through conducting innovative research, but more guidance on the research process is necessary to ensure the integrity and quality of the output. This book has been structured so that each chapter is largely free-standing, allowing the reader, undergraduate, postgraduate or practitioner, to reference the material with ease. It aims to provide practical guidance on conducting research and on writing a dissertation or report and begins by considering the general research background in a built environment context. It then covers research ethics before moving on to discuss the importance of selecting the right research topic and title and writing a clear abstract. The chapters then cover introducing a research project and the authors include a section on the problem statement, research questions, aims and objectives, research gaps and motivations for the study. The book goes on to cover the literature review, theoretical and conceptual frameworks, the various types of methodological approaches and when to apply them. The findings section, discussion of the results and the study's implications are then discussed before the final chapters cover the conclusion and recommendations. The book provides a useful reference for higher education students, graduates, postgraduates and practitioners engaged in all aspects of construction and built environment research.

The Impracticality of Practical Research Thomas Stanley Popkewitz, 2020-04-16 There is an alluring desire that research should lead us to find the practical knowledge that enables people to live a good life in a just and equitable society. This desire haunted the 19th-century emergence of the social sciences as a discipline; then became more pronounced in the postwar mobilizations of research. Today that desire lives on in the international assessments of national schools and in the structure of professional education, both of which influence government modernization of schools and also provide for people's well-being. American policy thus reflects research in which reforms are verified by scientific empirical evidences about what works in experiments and will work therefore in society. The book explores the idea that practical and useful knowledge changes over time and shows how this knowledge has been re-visioned in contemporary research on educational reform, instructional improvement and professionalization. The study of science draws on a range of social and cultural theories and historical studies to understand the politics of science as well as scientific knowledge that is concerned with social and educational change Research hopes to change social conditions to create a better life and to shape people whose conduct embodies these valued characteristics the good citizen parent or worker Yet this hope continually articulates the dangers that threaten this future Thomas Popkewitz explores how the research to correct social wrongs is paradoxically entangled with the inscription of differences that ultimately hamper the efforts to include
