Management Accounting Practices in Europe Michael D. Shields, 1998 I provide a perspective on four questions based on Management Accounting European Perspectives edited by Al Bhimani 1996 First seven factors are identified as having shaped management accounting practice in European nations academics education government professional associations consultants technology and inter nation transfer of information Second evidence supports the view that substantive change in management accounting techniques in European nations is occurring but on a limited basis e g adopting ABC for some products Third evidence indicates that convergence is occurring across European nations in the presence of management accounting techniques but not necessarily in how those techniques are used Fourth management accounting practice in European nations particularly the presence of techniques is converging on a global management accounting practice model I propose that management accounting practice particularly the presence of techniques is converging across nations at least for those firms that are affected by the global economy and diverging across industries both within and between nations

Management Accounting in Europe Norman B. Macintosh, 2008 On the basis of a reading of Management Accounting European Perspectives edited by Al Bhimani 1996 while there appears to be no historical pan European perspective on management accounting earlier in this century groupings of countries Mediteranian Western Europe Scandinavian and British did exhibit distinctive perspectives However following the advent of the relevance lost and strategic cost management movements and especially activity based costing there does seem to be emerging a certain homogeneity in European management accounting practices This commentary questions the intellectual and practical bases for these movements and activity based costing It also identifies some of the particular achievements of European management accounting researchers which are not covered in the book Management Accounting Al Bhimani, Michael Bromwich, 2009-09-16 Management Accounting is part of the celebrations to mark CIMA's 90th anniversary in 2009 It looks at the development of cost and management accounting from the founding of the Institute to today It considers a number of immediate challenges to management accountants and surveys a range of issues and challenges that will likely affect management accounting thought and practice in the future The authors examine the possibilities for accountants to widen their focus and become more familiar with the enterprise technology determining their organisations cost structures and with the effects of multiple production in various locations such as economies or diseconomies of scale Such change may require the alteration of traditional cost models used by accountants to become more nuanced The book suggests how this may be accomplished and highlights the need for management accountants to work as part of management teams throughout the organisation as business partners rather than remain grounded in specialist information provision roles Alnoor Bhimani is Professor of Management Accounting at the London School of Economics He is also a Certified Management Accountant as well as an author of 15 books and over 100 articles Michael Bromwich was CIMA's Professor of Accounting and Financial Management at the London School of Economics and Political Science 1985 to 2006 now Emeritus He is a Past President of CIMA 1987-88 and currently serves on CIMA's Technical Committee A unique survey of 90 years of CIMA research Analyses the research to determine future challenges for management accounting and business practices Charts the history of management accountancy and business practice over nearly 100 years Handbook of Management Accounting Research
