first book to explore women s leading role in animal protection in nineteenth century Britain drawing on rich archival sources Women founded bodies such as the Battersea Dogs Home the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and various groups that opposed vivisection They energetically promoted better treatment of animals both through practical action and through their writings such as Anna Sewell s Black Beauty Yet their efforts were frequently belittled by opponents or decried as typifying female sentimentality and hysteria Only the development of feminism in the later Victorian period enabled women to show that spontaneous fellow feeling with animals was a civilising force Women s own experience of oppressive patriarchy bonded them with animals who equally suffered from the dominance of masculine values in society and from an assumption that all powerful humans were entitled to exploit animals at will Suffrage Reader Claire Eustance,Joan Ryan,Laura

Ugolini,2000-02-01 This reader contains a mixture of new narratives on suffrage together with reinterpretations of some long established truths about the campaign by British women for the vote Some chapters shift the focus from the great and the good based in London and explore the issues which motivated supporters in other parts of Britain Other chapters illuminate the lengths some men were prepared to go to see women become voters and the lengths others were prepared to go to stop them A variety of topics is covered by the contributors who include both established scholars and writers relatively new to the field A Suffrage Reader provides an opportunity to push back the boundaries of suffrage history enabling us to think again about the diverse and sometimes contradictory motives for and outcomes of involvement in the long campaign by women for the vote in Britain The book also makes it possible to pause and reflect upon recent developments in writing on suffrage history and the extent to which this has been bound up with developing attitudes towards politics in the latter decades of the 20th century Felsensprengerin, Brückenbauerin, Wegbereiterin Cornelia Bartsch,Rebecca

Urban Politics and Space in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Barry M. Doyle, 2009-10-02 This book addresses the increasing regionalisation of urban governance and politics in an era of industrialisation suburbanisation and welfare extension It provides an important reassessment of the role structure and activities of urban elites highlighting their vitality and their interdependence and demonstrating the increasing regionalisation of municipal politics as towns sought to promote themselves extend services and even expand physically onto a regional level Moreover it explores the discourses surrounding space in which gender class morality and community all feature prominently How urban space and its uses were defined and redefined became key political weapons across the regions of England in the nineteenth century and these chapters show how a range of sources maps poems songs paintings illustrated journalism social investigations historical texts were employed by contemporaries to shape the urban and its image often by placing it in a regional context or contributing to the creation of a regional image and identity This collection illustrates the continuing vitality of the study of urban politics and governance and presents a rare attempt to place English urban history in a regional context Barry Doyle has assembled an impressive team of experts on urban politics to examine not just party politics but the wider machinery of government the boards agencies and committees that shaped British towns and cities after 1830 Space and place were contested and negotiated and a distinctive sense of local identity emerged In so doing the collection challenges some of the generalisations about the governance of urban Britain and reminds us that despite a shrinking globe the local and regional are crucial to our everyday lives The book should be read by all interested in and especially those working for local government Professor Richard Rodger University of Edinburgh In Urban Politics and Urban Space in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Regional Perspectives Barry Doyle brings together nine original essays by both established and younger authors to explore three inter related themes in urban history politics space and region from the early to mid nineteenth century to the mid twentieth century The book is conveniently divided into three sections dealing with structures of politics politics institutions and urban management and governance discourses and space Each of the contributions to this volume promises to both enrich our knowledge of specific moments in British politico urban development through the study of discrete developments in time and space and to open up and extend the debate on the British variant of urban modernity Each examines the ways in which local power space and regional relations developed and changed between the early nineteenth and mid twentieth century Localities their politics and communal identities are never really far from a national context indeed they largely shaped it as these essays make clear Doyle is to be commended for his endeavour not just as the editor but in particular for his introduction to the volume In a richly referenced essay that comes in at just over seven and half thousand words he casts a panoramic view over the field in the last few decades making connections where few contemporary urban historians care to tread Doyle gives us a forceful challenge to what he sees as a particularly English malaise in this period namely that of failing to recognise the potential of regional and local government to shape and manage the major reallocation of space and power a vital sphere of public life that is contemporary to our own times It is a masterly and well informed piece of writing that will set the standard for some years to come Professor Anthony McElligott University of Limerick
