Globalization and Local Adaptation in International Trade Law
 Pitman B. Potter, Ljiljana Biukovic, 2011-01-01
 The trade principles of Western liberal democracies are at the core of international trade law regimes and standards. Are non-Western societies uniformly adopting international standards, or are they adapting them to local norms and cultural values? This volume presents a new conceptual approach: the paradigm of selective adaptation. To explore and explain the reception of international trade law in the Pacific Rim, the contributors draw on examples from China, Japan, Thailand, and North America to show that formal acceptance of international trade standards through accession to the World Trade Organization and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade does not necessarily translate into uniform enforcement and acceptance at the local level. This book provides compelling evidence that non-uniform compliance will be a legitimate outcome of the globalization of international trade law.

Migrating into Financial Markets
 Matt Bakker, 2015-09-22
 A free ebook version of this title is available through Luminos, University of California Press's new open access publishing program for monographs. Visit www.luminosoa.org to learn more. We understand very little about the billions of dollars that flow throughout the world from migrants back to their home countries. In this rigorous and illuminating work, Matt Bakker, an economic sociologist, examines how these migrant remittances—the resources of some of the world's least affluent people—have come to be seen in recent years as a fundamental contributor to development in the migrant-sending states of the Global South. This book analyzes how the connection between remittances and development was forged through the concrete political and intellectual practices of policy entrepreneurs within a variety of institutional settings, from national government agencies and international development organizations to nongovernmental policy foundations and think tanks.

The United States, the European Union, and the Globalization of World Trade
 Thomas C. Fischer, 2000-04-30
 Professor Fischer presents a comprehensive overview of global trade at the start of a new century from a national, regional, and international viewpoint. He looks closely at the four dominant and competing economic systems: the United States, the European Union, Japan, and China, and argues that the traditional "we win, you lose" national trade paradigm has been replaced by one that is more collaborative one that is leaning toward de facto world governance He compares foreigners attitudes toward trade and markets with our own using four economic models that typify world trade today He examines the interface between national regional and international trading systems and between business and government then at the prospect of global trade management in different trade sectors under the GATT WTO and other organizations The result is a provocative discussion of global trade today Professor Fischer makes it clear that the United States needs allies Though its influence in the world trade arena will continue America s hegemony has ended The European Union is America s most obvious ally but it has many problems and ambitions of its own The North American Free Trade Agreement has solidified the North American market but it may isolate and lose South America while Japan China Russia and others are left to develop alliances of their own All these factors raise important global questions among them Can American capitalism prevail Should the United States proceed unilaterally as it has so often Or are regional and multinational arrangements preferable If there is further globalization as seems inevitable and if American influence is on the wane what group or organization will lead To explore these questions and provide the beginnings of answers Professor Fischer uses his four competing economic systems and handicaps the process country by country by sector with particular attention to transatlantic relations

International Investment Law and Arbitration from a Latin American Perspective Nitish Monebhurrin, Carolina Olarte-Bácares, Marco A. Velásquez-Ruiz, 2024-04-01 The book brings to light how Latin American states have traditionally stood before the field of International Investment Law and Arbitration It delves into their posture of resistance to critically examine how their perspective has gradually changed and how they have adapted and molded their investment agreements so as not to leave their position as players in the field of International Investment Law Many Latin American states have appeared as defendants before international investment tribunals and some of these like Venezuela Bolivia or Ecuador have denounced their international investment agreements Deeming the law field as imbalanced they have looked for alternatives to continue providing legal protection to foreign investors while protecting their right to regulate in the name of public interest Some interesting investment agreements models sometimes of a different ilk have consequently flourished and have arrested the attention of those studying or working with international investment law The main objective of this book is to critically discuss how Latin American states have accepted resisted or adapted themselves to international investment law and arbitration Accordingly the general connection between these states and international investment law are explained in an introduction which examines the general trends as per which Latin American states have offered a legal protection to foreign investments The first part enters the merits of where international investment law and arbitration stand in some Latin American states whereby the experience of Brazil Chile Argentina Venezuela and Uruguay are discussed The following parts explain the trends in international investment law and arbitration in Latin America These trends are namely related to dispute settlement and governance to the connection between investment law and human rights and finally to regionalization In these parts the experience of states like Brazil Colombia Peru and Mexico are perused
