Ruling Nature, Controlling People Luregn Lenggenghager,2018-09-17 Recent nature conservation initiatives in Southern Africa such as communal conservancies and peace parks are often embedded in narratives of economic development and ecological research They are also increasingly marked by militarisation and violence In Ruling Nature Controlling People Luregn Lenggenghager shows that these features were also characteristic of South African rule over the Caprivi Strip region in North Eastern Namibia especially in the fields of forestry fisheries and ultimately wildlife conservation In the process the increasingly internationalised war in the region from the late 1960s until Namibias independence in 1990 became intricately interlinked with contemporary nature conservation ecology and economic development projects By retracing such interdependencies Lenggenghager provides a novel perspective from which to examine the history of a region which has until now barely entered the focus of historical research He thereby highlights the enduring relevance of the supposedly peripheral Caprivi and its military scientific and environmental histories for efforts to develop a deeper understanding of the ways in which apartheid South Africa exerted state power Re-Viewing Resistance in Namibian History Silvester, Jeremy,2015-07-13 Re Viewing Resistance in Namibian History brings together the work of experienced academics and a new wave of young Namibian historians architects of the past who are working on a range of public history and heritage projects from late nineteenth century resistance to the use of songs from the role of gender in SWAPO s camps to memorialisation and from international solidarity to aspects of the history of Kavango and Caprivi In a culturally and politically diverse democracy such as Namibia there are bound to be different perspectives on the past and history will be as plural as the history tellers The chapters in this book reflect this diversity and combine to create a remarkable collection of divergent voices providing

World Market Transformation Robrecht Declercq, 2017-05-25 To the surprise of many regionally embedded clusters of small to medium sized businesses have continued to exist in spite of industrialisation and mass production While scholars have discovered that the advantages of embeddedness in terms of industrialisation were situated in interfirm cooperation and conflict resolving mechanisms it is far less clear how changing historical circumstances on the world market i e globalisation affected such systems Taking a look inside Leipzig a capital of the global fur industry between 1870 and 1939 with its numerous highly specialised businesses both in production as well as trade World Market Transformation examines the robustness of district firms within the highly volatile international fur business This book examines how firm embeddedness not only served to overcome challenges related to industrialisation but also strengthened the abilities of cluster firms to deal with changing world market circumstances World Market Transformation integrates the interior biased research tradition on local business systems and industrial districts into the exterior fields of global and transnational history It is demonstrated that the local business district not only emerged because of the expansion of international trade but that district processes of interfirm cooperation also gave shape to the spatial distribution conventions and structures of the very same world market The analysis of embedded communities thus offers an important instrument to examine phenomena of economic globalisation but also how such macro economic developments have been shaped and actively constructed by local actors
