Natural Rights David George Ritchie, 1903

Darwinian Natural Right Larry Arnhart, 1998-01-01 This book shows how Darwinian biology supports an Aristotelian view of ethics as rooted in human nature Defending a conception of Darwinian natural right based on the claim that the good is the desirable the author argues that there are at least twenty natural desires that are universal to all human societies because they are based in human biology The satisfaction of these natural desires constitutes a universal standard for judging social practice as either fulfilling or frustrating human nature although prudence is required in judging what is best for particular circumstances The author studies the familial bonding of parents and children and the conjugal bonding of men and women as illustrating social behavior that conforms to Darwinian natural right He also studies slavery and psychopathy as illustrating social behavior that contradicts Darwinian natural right He argues as well that the natural moral sense does not require religious belief although such belief can sometimes reinforce the dictates of nature

Permissible Killing Suzanne Uniacke, 1994 Do individuals have a positive right of self defence And if so what are the limits of this right Under what conditions if any does this use of force extend to the defence of others These are some of the issues explored by Dr Uniacke in this comprehensive philosophical discussion of the principles relevant to self defence as a moral and legal justification of homicide She establishes a unitary right of self defence and defence of others one which grounds the permissibility of the use of necessary and proportionate defensive force against culpable and non culpable active and passive unjust threats Particular topics discussed include the nature of moral and legal justification and excuse natural law justifications of homicide in self defence the Principle of Double Effect and the claim that homicide in self defence is justified as unintended killing and the question of self preferential killing This is a lucid and sophisticated account of the complex notion of justification revolving around a critical discussion of recent trends in the law of self defence
