Cordesman, 1999-03-30 Iran today is still struggling with the legacy of its own Islamic revolution and is deeply divided between the moderates who enjoy broad public support and the conservatives who control the levers of power The mixed policies that result are reflected in Iran's ambivalent military posture In recent years Iran has only conducted a limited build up of its armed forces and has cut defense spending and arms imports On the other hand Iran has developed a carefully focused program that threatens shipping in the lower Gulf and the world's oil exports It has strengthened its capability for unconventional warfare and continues to be a significant proliferator setting up indigenous military industries and developing a greater ability to import weapons In this authoritative analysis of interest to Middle Eastern specialists and military affairs experts alike Anthony Cordesman concludes that the continuation of Iran's current defensive security posture depends as much on these economic factors as on the outcomes of domestic political rivalries Iran may eventually limit any military expansion to a necessary defensive strength and set strategic goals for itself that are compatible with the legitimate interests of other nations or it may choose a more aggressive course Regardless of the ultimate outcome argues Cordesman it does no good to either demonize or excuse Iranian policies Instead the United States and other nations with interests in the Middle East and Central Asia need to deal realistically with Iran as a reemerging regional power
