A Medieval Herbal Minta Collins, Sandra Raphael, 2003 The Tractatus de herbis reproduced here is one of the many rare and precious manuscripts in the collections of the British Library It is an illustrated herbal which comes from a collection of pharmacological texts written in southern Italy around AD 1300AD which is now known as British Library Egerton MS 747 probably the original manuscript of the Tractatus de herbis a type of herbal which was to become one of the most influential texts on medicinal plants between the 14th and 16th centuries It contains a vast corpus of information about plants and their medicinal uses inherited from Greek Roman and Arabic sources and combines this with paintings of plants which in their observation of nature anticipate for the first time modern botanical illustration since Antiquity the artist actually looked at the plants and drew them from life wherever possible The paintings may seem rather stiff and two dimensional to us today but at the time they were amazingly innovative Even in panel and wall paintings there is nothing comparable origin is not recorded there is no trace of who the owners were and no contemporary documents mention it However close examination of its physical characteristics size binding quality of parchment and contents layout style of writing illumination suggest it closely resembles a number of manuscripts made in southern Italy around Palermo and Naples and illustrated by the artist Jacobellus of Salerno

Visualizing Medieval Medicine and Natural History, 1200-1550 Jean A. Givens, Karen M. Reeds, Alain Touwaide, 2016-12-05 Images in medieval and early modern treatises on medicine pharmacy and natural history often confound our expectations about the functions of medical and scientific illustrations They do not look very much like the things they purport to portray and their actual usefulness in everyday medical practice or teaching is not obvious By looking at works as diverse as herbals jewellery surgery manuals lay health guides cinquecento paintings manuscripts of Pliny s Natural History and Leonardo s notebooks Visualizing Medieval Medicine and Natural History 1200 1550 addresses fundamental questions about the interplay of art and science from the thirteenth to the mid sixteenth century What counts as a medical illustration in the Middle Ages What are the purposes and audiences of the illustrations in medieval medical pharmaceutical and natural history texts How are images used to clarify expand authenticate and replace these texts How do images of natural objects observed phenomena and theoretical concepts amplify texts and convey complex cultural attitudes What features lead us to regard some of these images as typically medieval while other exactly contemporary images strike us as Renaissance or early modern in character Art historians medical historians historians of science and specialists in manuscripts and early printed books will welcome this wide ranging interdisciplinary examination of the role of visualization in early scientific inquiry

Literature in English brings together the insights of these new fields and approaches with those of more familiar texts and methods of study to provide a comprehensive overview of the state of medieval literature today. It also returns to first principles in posing fundamental questions about the nature, scope and significance of the discipline and the directions that it might take in the next decade. The Handbook contains 44 newly commissioned essays from both world-leading scholars and exciting new scholarly voices. Topics covered range from the canonical genres of Saints' lives, sermons, romance, lyric poetry and heroic poetry, major themes including monstrosity and marginality, patronage and literary politics, manuscript studies and vernacularity are investigated and there are close readings of key texts such as Beowulf, Wulf and Eadwacer and Ancrene Wisse and key authors from Ifric to Geoffrey Chaucer, Langland and the Gawain Poet.

The Green Middle Ages Claudine Chavannes-Mazel, Linda Ijpelaar, 2025-10-01 How green were people in late antiquity and the Middle Ages? Unlike today, the nature around them was approached with faith, trust and care. The population size was many times smaller than today and human impact on nature not as extreme as it is now. People did not have to worry about issues like deforestation and sustainability. This book is about the knowledge of plants and where that knowledge came from. How did people use earth and plants in ancient times and what did they know about their nutritional or medicinal properties? From which plants one could make dyes such as indigo, woad and dyer's madder. Is it possible to determine that through technical research today? Which plants could be found in a ninth-century monastery garden and what is the symbolic significance of plants in secular and religious literature? The Green Middle Ages addresses these and other issues, including the earliest herbarium collections with a leading role for the palaeography and beautiful illuminations from numerous medieval manuscripts kept in Dutch and other Western libraries and museums.

Botanical Icons Andrew Griebeler, 2024-02-28 A richly illustrated account of how premodern botanical illustrations document evolving knowledge about plants and the ways they were studied in the past. This book traces the history of botanical illustration in the Mediterranean from antiquity to the early modern period. By examining Greek, Latin and Arabic botanical inquiry in this early era, Andrew Griebeler shows how diverse and sophisticated modes of plant depiction emerged and ultimately gave rise to practices now recognized as central to modern botanical illustration. The author draws on centuries of remarkable and varied documentation from across Europe and the Mediterranean. Lavishly illustrated, Botanical Icons marshals ample evidence for a dynamic and critical tradition of botanical inquiry and nature observation in the late antique and medieval Mediterranean. The author reveals that many of the critical practices characteristic of modern botanical illustrations began in premodern manuscript culture. Consequently, he demonstrates that the distinctions between pre and early modern botanical illustration center more on the advent of print, the expansion of collections and documentation and the narrowing of the range of accepted forms of illustration than on the invention of critical and observational practices exclusive to modernity. Griebeler's emphasis on continuity, intercultural collaboration and the gradual transformation of Mediterranean traditions of critical botanical illustration persuasively counters previously prevalent narratives of rupture and Western European exceptionalism in the histories of art and science
