

- Seeing, Doing, and Knowing: A Philosophical Theory of Sense Perception, by Mohan Matthen. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005. Pp. xxii + 362. H/b xx, P/b xx.

In the prelude to Matthen's marvelous Seeing, Doing, and Knowing—"The New Philosophy of Vision"—he welcomes a comparatively recent development in theorizing about perception. Vision (for example) is not now treated as merely presenting the subject with a "sensuously given mosaic of color spots" (David Lewis's phrase, quoted at p. 2), the relevance of which to the scene before the eyes is obscure, but rather as "delivering an interpreted message" (p. 5) about our familiar three-dimensional environment. "Sensory experiences are not insulated inner events that must be decoded or diagnosed by us before they can be put to use, but rather inherently meaningful states with representational significance beyond themselves" (p. 19). And that emphasis on how sensory awareness purports to be of objects located in three-dimensional space fits naturally with the idea that our sensory systems are "problem solvers" (p. 5). In the case of vision, the fundamental task is what is often called "inverse optics": starting from the activity of receptors in the retina, the visual system attempts to extract the best hypothesis about the environment.

Of course, the problem the visual system tries to solve has no unique solution, in the sense that innumerable environmental configurations could be responsible for any given pattern of retinal stimulation. One of Matthen's examples is illumination and surface reflectance, which—simplifying matters somewhat—are jointly responsible for the light reaching the eye from an object. Following Matthen, let us add to the inverse optics picture the claim that color is reflectance. Since the light reaching the eye is the product of the illumination and reflectance, in essence the visual system has to solve a single equation with two unknowns. Yet the visual system somehow manages to disentangle the relative contributions of the illumination and reflectance, with the result that we see the colors of surfaces reasonably accurately. Exactly how the visual system solves this problem is disputed, but as far as research programmes in cognitive science go, this one is far from degenerating.

Seeing Doing And Knowing A Philosophical Theory Of Sense Perception:

Seeing, Doing, and Knowing Mohan Matthen, 2005-02-10 Seeing Doing and Knowing is an original and comprehensive philosophical treatment of sense perception as it is currently investigated by cognitive neuroscientists. Its central theme is the task-oriented specialization of sensory systems across the biological domain. Sensory systems are automatic sorting machines they engage in a process of classification. Human vision sorts and orders external objects in terms of a specialized proprietary scheme of categories: colours, shapes, speeds, and directions of movement etc. This Sensory Classification Thesis implies that sensation is not a naturally caused image from which an organism must infer the state of the world; beyond it is more like an internal communication, a signal concerning the state of the world issued by a sensory system in accordance with internal conventions for the use of an organism's other systems. This is why sensory states are both easily understood and persuasive. Sensory classification schemes are purpose-built to serve the knowledge-gathering and pragmatic needs of particular types of organisms. They are specialized: a bee or a bird does not see exactly what a human does. The Sensory Classification Thesis helps clarify this specialization in perceptual content and supports a new form of realism about the deliverances of sensation. Pluralistic Realism is based on the idea that sensory systems coevolve with an organism's other systems; they are not simply moulded to the external world. The last part of the book deals with reference in vision. Cognitive scientists now believe that vision guides the limbs by means of a subsystem that links up with the objects of physical manipulation in ways that bypass sensory categories. In a novel extension of this theory, Matthen argues that motion-guiding vision is integrated with sensory classification in conscious vision. This accounts for the quasi-demonstrative form of visual states. This particular object is red and so on. He uses this idea to cast new light on the nature of perceptual objects, pictorial representation, and the visual representation of space.

The Dreaming Mind Melanie G. Rosen, 2024-02-27 The Dreaming Mind provides an insightful interdisciplinary approach to the study of dreaming, exploring its nature and examining some of the implications of dream states for theories of consciousness, cognition, and the self. Drawing on research from philosophy, cognitive science, and psychology, the book reveals new insights into the sleeping and waking mind. It considers philosophical thinking such as extended mind theory, theories of consciousness, and theories of the self, applying these to empirical dream research. The book embraces a pluralistic account of dreaming, showing how dream experiences can be highly varied in content and cognition, and discusses the implications of dreaming for a variety of influential consciousness theories, including higher-order thought theory, global workspace theory, and the phenomenal access distinction. Alongside imaginative and hallucinatory dreaming, the book also discusses vicarious dreaming and its implications for philosophy of the self. Offering an integrative approach into our understanding of dreams and the mind, this book is essential reading for students and researchers of consciousness, dreams, philosophy, and cognitive sciences, as well as anyone who is curious about dreaming.

groundbreaking and influential work in Buddhist philosophy Mark Siderits is the pioneer of fusion or confluence philosophy a boldly systematic approach to doing philosophy premised on the idea that rational reconstruction of positions in one tradition in light of another can sometimes help address perennial problems and often lead to new and valuable insights Exemplifying the many virtues of the confluence approach this collection of essays covers all core areas of Buddhist philosophy as well as topics and disputes in contemporary Western philosophy relevant to its study They consider in particular the ways in which questions concerning personal identity figure in debates about agency cognition causality ontological foundations foundational truths and moral cultivation Most of these essays engage Siderits work directly building on his pathbreaking ideas and interpretations Many deal with issues that have become a common staple in philosophical engagements with traditions outside the West Their variety and breadth bear testimony to the legacy of Siderits impact in shaping the contemporary conversation in Buddhist philosophy and its reverberations in mainstream philosophy giving readers a clear sense of the remarkable scope of his work

A Pluralist's Guide to Solving Molyneux's Problem Brian

Glenney,2024-12-31 This book presents a novel pluralist strategy for answering Molyneux's 300 year old conundrum Would a person born blind but given sight identify a shape previously known only by their touch The author interweaves historical scholarship with contemporary philosophical work and empirical research on animal infant and adult human perception The author argues that we need a new approach to Molyneux's problem because we do not know what the problem is really about and it is untestable because a Molyneux subject cannot be physically realized He criticizes Molyneux's question for its simplistic taxonomy of the blind that groups significant individual differences into a singular ontology Research in the cognitive sciences confirms that various kinds of blindness can co occur such as ocular cortical and psychological blindness Therefore the author adopts an explanatory pluralism for answering Molyneux's problem which includes no yes and no answer answers according to the domain of inquiry being used This account provides a research based answer to a long standing problem using previously unheeded insights particularly from animal crossmodal perception studies to retell a more complex story of perception its levels of explanation and integration A Pluralist's Guide to Solving Molyneux's Problem will be of interest to researchers and advanced students working in comparative psychology epistemology history of philosophy philosophy of perception world is In The Innocent Eye Nico Orlandi defends a position that aligns with this second world centered tradition but that also respects some of the insights of constructivism Orlandi develops an embedded understanding of visual processing according to which while visual percepts are representational states the states and structures that precede the production of percepts are not representations If we study the environmental contingencies in which vision occurs and we properly distinguish functional states and features of the visual apparatus from representational states and features we obtain an empirically more plausible world centered account Orlandi shows that this account accords well with models of vision in perceptual psychology such as Natural Scene Statistics and Bayesian approaches to perception and outlines some of the ways in which it differs from recent enactive approaches to vision The main difference is that although the embedded account recognizes the importance of movement for perception it does not appeal to action to uncover the richness of visual stimulation The upshot is that constructive models of vision ascribe mental representations too liberally ultimately misunderstanding the notion Orlandi offers a proposal for what mental representations are that following insights from Brentano James and a number of contemporary cognitive scientists appeals to the notions of de coupleability and absence to distinguish representations from mere tracking states The Routledge Handbook of Philosophy of Colour Derek H.
