Feeding Cahokia Gayle J. Fritz, 2019-01-15 Winner of the 2020 Society for Economic Botany s Mary W Klinger Book Award An authoritative and thoroughly accessible overview of farming and food practices at Cahokia Agriculture is rightly emphasized as the center of the economy in most studies of Cahokian society but the focus is often predominantly on corn This farming economy is typically framed in terms of ruling elites living in mound centers who demanded tribute and a mass surplus to be hoarded or distributed as they saw fit Farmers are cast as commoners who grew enough surplus corn to provide for the elites Feeding Cahokia Early Agriculture in the North American Heartland presents evidence to demonstrate that the emphasis on corn has created a distorted picture of Cahokia s agricultural practices Farming at Cahokia was biologically diverse and as such less prone to risk than was maize dominated agriculture Gayle J Fritz shows that the division between the so called elites and commoners simplifies and misrepresents the statuses of farmers a workforce consisting of adult women and their daughters who belonged to kin groups crosscutting all levels of the Cahokian social order Many farmers had considerable influence and decision making authority and they were valued for their economic contributions their skills and their expertise in all matters relating to soils and crops Fritz examines the possible roles played by farmers in the processes of producing and preparing food and in maintaining cosmological balance This highly accessible narrative by an internationally known paleoethnobotanist highlights the biologically diverse agricultural system by focusing on plants such as erect knotweed chenopod and maygrass which were domesticated in the midcontinent and grown by generations of farmers before Cahokia Mounds grew to be the largest Native American population center north of Mexico Fritz also looks at traditional farming systems to apply strategies that would be helpful to modern agriculture including reviving wild and weedy descendants of these lost crops for redomestication With a wealth of detail on specific sites traditional foods artifacts such as famous figurines and color photos of significant plants Feeding Cahokia will satisfy both scholars and interested readers

The environmental diversity of North America is astounding from the circumpolar tundra with few plants more than a few centimeters tall to the lush semitropical forests of the southeastern United States and Caribbean Basin No less remarkable is the record of plants usage by the various indigenous people who have been living there for more than twelve millennia For the vast majority of this time their livelihood food shelter fuel and medicine depended on their knowledge and use of the environment The most comprehensive overview in more than half a century about the interconnectedness of prehistoric Native Americans and their botanical world this book and its forthcoming companion volume People and Plants in Ancient Western North America present the latest information on three major topics the use of native plants the history of crops and their uses and how humans affected their environment In this volume expert scholars summarize the prehistoric ethnobotany of four regions the Eastern Woodlands W Cowan K Gremillion M Scarry B Smith and G Wagner Northeast G Crawford and D Smith Plains M Adair and Caribbean L Newsom and D Pearsall This volume contributes significantly to our understanding of the lives of prehistoric people as well as the forces that influenced their communities their ingenuity and their ecological impact It also serves as a guide for designing environmentally sustainable lives today Cahokia, the Great Native American Metropolis Biloine W. Young, Melvin Leo Fowler, 2000 Five centuries before the Pilgrims landed in Massachusetts indigenous North Americans had already built a vast urban center on the banks of the Mississippi River where East St Louis is today This is the story of North America s largest archaeological site told through the lives personalities and conflicts of the men and women who excavated and studied it At its height the metropolis of Cahokia had twenty thousand inhabitants in the city center with another ten thousand in the outskirts Cahokia was a precisely planned community with a fortified central city and surrounding suburbs Its entire plan reflected the Cahokian s concept of the cosmos Its centerpiece Monk s Mound ten stories tall is the largest pre Columbian structure in North America with a base circumference larger than that of either the Great Pyramid of Khufu in Egypt or the Pyramid of the Sun at Teotihuacan in Mexico Nineteenth century observers maintained that the mounds too sophisticated for primitive Native American cultures had to have been created by a superior non Indian race perhaps even by survivors of the lost continent of Atlantis Melvin Fowler the dean of Cahokia archaeologists and Biloine Whiting Young tell an engrossing story of the struggle to protect the site from the encroachment of interstate highways and urban sprawl Now identified as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO and protected by the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency Cahokia serves as a reminder that the indigenous North Americans had a past of complexity and great achievement

Ohio Hopewell Community Organization William S. Dancey, 2002-10 Contains papers from an April 1992 symposium plus other papers evaluating Olaf Prufer's thesis of the 1960s stating that the Native builders of the earthen mounds of southern Ohio lived in small scattered hamlets Topics include problems and solutions in the study of dispersed communities determining sedentism in the archaeological record habitation at earthworks and evidence and case studies from various sites Includes bandw maps Of interest to professional and amateur archaeologists Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR
