The Selected Poems of
ROSARIO
CASTELLANOS

A mystic and a feminist, Rosario Castellanos opened the way for other Mexican women to become writers. Castellanos published eight volumes of poetry and in 1972 anthologized them in a book entitled Poesía No Eres Tú (Poetry Is Not You). The Selected Poems of Rosario Castellanos was assembled from that anthology and is the most comprehensive collection of her poetry available in the United States.

Her poetry has been compared to Sylvia Plath's in its emotional intensity and to the work of Saint John of the Cross in its mystical lyricism. Many of her poems have a slightly humorous tone which blunts the otherwise ruthless look at love and loss, desire and pain. Castellanos's interior world often merges with the natural world:

I sit here with all my words intact,
 as if with a basket of green fruit.

ROSARIO CASTELLANOS (1925-1974) was born in Mexico City and grew up in the Mayan region of southern Mexico. She was much influenced by the Indians and later returned to this region and gave the land she inherited back to the Indians. An ardent feminist, her essay on feminine culture aided the liberation of the Mexican women. She wrote plays, novels, stories, and poetry. At the time of her death she was a diplomat in Israel.
