Semantic Structure In The Finnish Lexicon:

Semantic Structure in the Finnish Lexicon Aili Flint, 1980 Semantic Structure in the Finnish Lexicon Aili Flint, 1979 Morphological Structure, Lexical Representation and Lexical Access (RLE Linguistics C: Applied Linguistics) Dominiek Sandra, Marcus Taft, 2014-01-10 The main concern of this work is whether morphemes play a role in the lexical representation and processing of several types of polymorphemic words and more particularly at what precise representational and processing level The book comprises two theoretical contributions and a number of empirical ones One theoretical paper discusses several possible motivations for a morphologically organised mental lexicon like the economy of representation view and the efficiency of processing view and lays out the weaknesses that are associated with some of these motivations The other theoretical paper offers an interactive activation reinterpretation of the findings that were originally reported within the lexical search framework The empirical papers together cover a relatively broad array of language types and mainly deal with visual word recognition in normals in the context of lexical morphology derived and compound words Evidence is reported on the function of stems and affixes as processing units in prefixed and suffixed derivations The role of semantic transparency in the lexical representation of compounds is studied as is the effect of orthographic ambiguity on the parsing of novel compounds The inflection derivational distinction is approached in the context of Finnish a highly agglutinative language with much richer morphology than the languages usually studied in psycholinguistic experiments on polymorphemic words Two other contributions also approach the study object in the context of relatively uncharted domains one presents data on Chinese a language which uses a different script type logographic from the languages that are usually studied alphabetic script and another one presents data on language production The Fruits of Empirical Linguistics: Process Sam Featherston, Susanne Winkler, 2009 The architecture of the human language faculty has been one of the main foci of the linguistic research of the last half century This branch of linguistics broadly known as Generative Grammar is concerned with the formulation of explanatory formal accounts of linguistic phenomena with the ulterior goal of gaining insight into the properties of the language organ The series comprises high quality monographs and collected volumes that address such issues The topics in this series range from phonology to semantics from syntax to information structure from mathematical linguistics to studies of the lexicon The Fate of Mood and Modality in Language Death Petar Kehayov, 2017-07-24 Research into the grammar of language death is often biased toward formal processes e g paradigmatic levelling In this study the author changes the perspective and shows that the relative susceptibility of linguistic elements to loss change and innovation in language death circumstances can be dependent on meaning and thus organized along semantic notions rather than along structure Studies in Interactional Linguistics Margret Selting, Elizabeth Couper-Kuhlen, 2001-01-01 Current interactional linguistic research appears to be crystallizing around systematic themes which are all represented in this collection of papers In the first section where the relation between language and interaction

is viewed from the perspective of language structure several articles deal with the potential of a single structure for both turn and sequence construction revealing a play off between planned and occasioned syntax with potentially far reaching consequences for language development Other articles deal with lexical expressions as resources for the conduct of interaction showing how they are heavily dependent on turn position and sequential context for their meaning potential In the second section with a view from the perspective of the interactional order a systematic focus of interest lies on three different conversational tasks projecting turn and turn unit completion starting up turns with non beginnings and self repairing The cross linguistic studies here all agree that common interactional tasks may well be carried out by quite different linguistic practices and that these practices are dependent to a certain extent on language features which are typologically distinct

Derivational Networks Across Languages Lívia Körtvélyessy, Alexandra Bagasheva, Pavol Štekauer, 2020-06-08 This pioneering research brings a new insight into derivational processes in terms of theory method and typology Theoretically it conceives of derivation as a three dimensional system Methodologically it introduces a range of parameters for the evaluation of derivational networks including the derivational role combinability and blocking effects of semantic categories the maximum derivational potential and its actualization in relation to simple underived words and the maximum and average number of orders of derivation Each language specific chapter has a unified structure which made it possible to identify in the final typologically oriented chapter the systematicity and regularity in developing derivational networks in a sample of forty European languages and in a few language genera and families This is supported by considerations about the role of word classes morphological types and the differences and similarities between word formation processes of the languages belonging to the same genus family

Cross-Categorical Special Education Needs in Finland and Germany Birgit Herz, Matti Kuorelahti, 2007 Teacher Education ranks on the top on the agenda in Germany as well as in Finland In order to comply with the right for inclusion as stated by the EU s and UN s convention for the right of children this study focuses on the question How to promote inclusive education Finland and Germany have different policies towards inclusion Within the German system of general education heterogeneity is very often perceived not as a chance but as a disturbance The Finnish teachers have learned to live with the heterogeneity in their classrooms and the dropout rate is lower than in Germany It is evident that bilateral research cooperation can help finding better ways for the inclusion of all pupils Particularly in the field of Learning Disabilities Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties but also as far as problems in reading and writing are concerned this research study opens new perspectives on a multi track support for all pupils

Modals in the Languages of Europe Björn Hansen, Ferdinand de Haan, 2009-12-15 This book is the first comprehensive survey of modals and modal constructions in the languages of Europe It is a collaborative effort between scholars from Europe and the United States stemming from a workshop on Modals in the Languages of Europe in Valencia The aim of this book is to describe the properties of modals and modal constructions in the European area and to compare the systems in individual languages or language families from an areal and genetic perspective For the sake of contrast the book also looks at the expression of modality in some languages just outside of Europe The book consists of fourteen chapters on modal systems in individual languages or language families written by experts in the respective languages and an introductory and concluding chapter written by the editors The book gives both a description of the modals in the individual languages and an account of the nature and status of modals in general It provides the reader with a theoretical account of how modals and modal constructions are grammaticalized This theoretical account is informed by the parameters of grammaticalization of Christian Lehmann These parameters were chosen because they are language independent as opposed to more language specific criteria for instance the NICE criteria for English The parameters themselves are examined as well for their suitability as part of any theory of grammaticalization The book thus gives readers access to a collection of data on modality that surpasses most works in this field and also provides a fresh perspective on issues of grammaticalization and language contact It is therefore of interest to scholars of modality language contact and areal linguistics grammaticalization theory and typology

Translation Universals Anna Mauranen, Pekka Kujamäki, 2004 Translation universals is one of the most intriguing and controversial topics in recent translation studies Can we discover general laws of translation independent of the particularities of individual translations Research into this is new serious empirical work only began in the late nineties The present volume offers the state of the art on the issue It includes theoretical discussion on alternative conceptualisations and new distinctions around the basic concepts Several papers test hypotheses on universals in the light of recent work in different languages and some suggest new ones emerging from empirical work over the last two to three years The book contributes to the search for generalities in translation the methodological solutions available and presents emerging evidence on the kinds of regularities that large scale research is bringing forth On a more practical level the applicability of the hypotheses and findings to translator education is as always a concern for translation studies
