Semantics For Concurrency:

Semantics for Concurrency Marta Z. Kwiatkowska, Michael W. Shields, Richard M. Thomas, 2013-03-14 The semantics of concurrent systems is one of the most vigorous areas of research in theoretical computer science but suffers from disagreement due to different and often incompatible attitudes towards abstracting non sequential behaviour When confronted with process algebras which give rise to very elegant highly abstract and compositional models traditionally based on the interleaving abstraction some argue that the wealth of contribution they have made is partially offset by the difficulty in dealing with topics such as fairness On the other hand the non interleaving approaches based on causality although easing problems with fairness and confusion still lack structure compositionality and the elegance of the interleaving counterparts Since both these approaches have undoubtedly provided important contributions towards understanding of concurrent systems one should concentrate on what they have in common rather than the way they differ The International Workshop on Semantics for Concurrency held at the University of Leicester on 23-25 July 1990 was organised to help overcome this problem Its main objective was not to be divisive but rather to encourage discussions leading towards the identification of the positive objective features of the main approaches in the hope of furthering common understanding The Workshop met with an excellent response and attracted contributions from all over the world The result was an interesting and varied programme which was a combination of invited and refereed papers The invited speakers were Prof dr E Best Hildesheim University Prof dr A

A Uniform Approach to the Semantics of Concurrency, 1991 The role of semantics is to allow reasoning about high level programming languages through the use of models Our research focuses on two approaches to semantics Denotational Semantics and Operational Semantics and their applications to languages supporting concurrent computation In Denotational Semantics mathematical models are studied which have the same operations on them as those that are available in the language such as sequential composition and parallel composition etc and a function is defined which assigns meanings in the model to programs in the language This function should be compositional i.e. a homomorphism with respect to the operations of the language In this way the meaning of a complicated program is made up as the composite of the meanings of its constituent parts so the meanings of complicated programs can be understood in terms of the meanings of their simpler constituents The other approach we study is Operational Semantics where the meaning of a program is given by means of a Labelled Transition System which reflects the transitions of the program on an abstract machine In the approach and idealized implementation of the program is developed and problems associated with implementation can be addressed in an abstract setting

Comparative Concurrency Semantics and Refinement of Actions Rob J. Van Glabbeek, 1996 Ten Years Of Concurrency Semantics: Selected Papers Of The Amsterdam Concurrency Group J W De Bakker, J Rutten, 1992-09-22 This collection of reprints describes a unified treatment of semantics covering a wide range of notions in parallel languages Included are several foundational and introductory papers developing the methodology of metric semantics studies on the comparative semantics of parallel object oriented and logic programming and papers on full abstraction and transition system specifications In addition links with process algebra and the theory of domain equations are established Throughout a uniform proof technique is used to relate operational and denotational models The approach is flexible in that both linear time branching time or bisimulation and intermediate models can be handled as well as schematic and interpreted elementary actions The reprints are preceded by an extensive introduction surveying related work on metric semantics The Semantics of Concurrency in FP2 Philippe Schnoebelen, 1985
