The National Register of Historic Places, A History of Education in Kentucky William E. Ellis, 2011-06-17. Kentucky is nationally renowned for horses, bourbon, rich natural resources, and unfortunately hindered by a deficient educational system. Though its reputation is not always justified in national rankings for grades K-12 and higher education, Kentucky consistently ranks among the lowest states in education funding, literacy, and student achievement. In A History of Education in Kentucky, William E. Ellis illuminates the successes and failures of public and private education in the commonwealth since its settlement. Ellis demonstrates how political leaders in the nineteenth century created a culture that devalued public education and refused to adequately fund it. He also analyzes efforts by teachers and policy makers to enact vital reforms and establish adequate, equal education and discusses ongoing battles related to religious instruction, integration, and the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA). A History of Education in Kentucky is the only up-to-date, single-volume history of education in the commonwealth. Offering more than mere policy analysis, this comprehensive work tells the story of passionate students, teachers, and leaders who have worked for progress from the 1770s to the present day. Despite the prevailing pessimism about education in Kentucky, Ellis acknowledges signs of a vibrant educational atmosphere in the state. By advocating a better understanding of the past, Ellis looks to the future and challenges Kentuckians to avoid historic failures and build on their successes.

A Shared History Amy J. Lueck, 2020-01-06. In the nineteenth century, advanced educational opportunities were not clearly demarcated and defined. Author Amy J. Lueck demonstrates that public high schools, in addition to colleges and universities, were vital settings for advanced rhetoric and writing instruction. Lueck shows how the history of high schools in Louisville, Kentucky, connects with, contradicts, and complicates the accepted history of writing instruction and underscores the significance of high schools to rhetoric and composition history and the reform efforts in higher education today. Lueck explores Civil War and Reconstruction era challenges to the University of Louisville and nearby local high schools, their curricular transformations, and their fate in regard to national education reform efforts. These institutions reflect many of the educational trends and developments of the day: college and university building, the emergence of English education as the dominant curriculum for higher learning, student-centered pedagogies, and educational theories, the development and transformation of normal schools, the introduction of manual education and its mutation into vocational education, and the extension of advanced education to women, African American, and working-class students Lueck demonstrates a complex genealogy of interconnections among high schools colleges and universities that demands we rethink our categories and standards of assessment and our field's history A shift in our historical narrative would promote a move away from an emphasis on the preparation transition and movement of student writers from high school to college or university and instead allow a greater focus on the fostering of rich rhetorical practices and pedagogies at all educational levels As the definition of college level writing becomes increasingly contested once again Lueck invites a reassessment of the discipline's understanding of contemporary programs based in high schools like dual credit and concurrent enrollment

Story's Legal Digest and Directory of Lawyers, 1892 The Rise of the Urban South Lawrence H. Larsen, 2014-07-15 Operating under an outmoded system of urban development and faced by the vicissitudes of the Civil War and Reconstruction southerners in the nineteenth century built a network of cities that met the needs of their society In this pioneering exploration of that intricate story Lawrence H. Larsen shows that in the antebellum period southern entrepreneurs built cities in layers to facilitate the movement of cotton First came the colonial cities followed by those of the piedmont the New West the Gulf Coast and the interior By the Civil War cotton could move by a combination of road rail and river through a network of cities for example from Jackson to Memphis to New Orleans to Europe In the Gilded Age building on past practices the South continued to make urban gains Men like Henry Grady of Atlanta and Henry Watterson of Louisville used broader regional objectives to promote their own cities Grady successfully sold Atlanta one of the most southern of cities demographically as a city with a northern outlook Watterson tied Louisville to national goals in railroad building The New South movement did not succeed in bringing the region to parity with the rest of the nation yet the South continued to rise along older lines By 1900 far from being a failure in terms of the general course of American development the South had created an urban system suited to its needs while avoiding the promotional frenzy that characterized the building of cities in the North Based upon federal and local sources this book will become the standard work on nineteenth century southern urbanization a subject too long unexplored

Louisville's Butchertown Edna Kubala, 2010 Located just east of downtown Louisville Butchertown is a fascinating mix of architectural styles businesses and history The neighborhood is named for the early Louisville butchers who found the area's strategic location on Beargrass Creek and its proximity to the Frankfort and Shelbyville turnpikes ideal for their operations The link to butchers was further solidified when the Bourbon House later called the Bourbon Stock Yard was established in 1834 anchoring Butchertown as Louisville's meatpacking neighborhood Many points of interest can be found amid the predominantly brick historic homes including the Last Chance Saloon the Oertel Brewery and the Thomas Edison House Museum Discover Vernon Lanes one of the four oldest bowling alleys in the country which has been in operation since 1886 on Story Avenue Some photographs illustrate the immense damage done by floodwaters in 1937 and 1945 Also pictured are a floodwall built as a result of the 1937 flood and interstate construction during the 1960s both of which greatly altered the character of the neighborhood
