Seeing Landscapes:

On Landscapes Susan Herrington, 2013-12-19 There is no escaping landscape it's everywhere and part of everyone's life. Landscapes have received much less attention in aesthetics than those arts we can choose to ignore such as painting or music but they can tell us a lot about the ethical and aesthetic values of the societies that produce them. Drawing on examples from a wide range of landscapes from around the world and throughout history Susan Herrington considers the ways landscapes can affect our emotions, our imaginations, and our understanding of the passage of time. On Landscapes reveals the design work involved in even the most naturalistic of landscapes and the ways in which contemporary landscapes are turning the challenges of the industrial past into opportunities for the future. Inviting us to thoughtfully see and experience the landscapes that we encounter in our daily lives, On Landscapes demonstrates that art is all around us.

Rational Landscapes and Humanistic Geography Edward Relph, 2015-07-30 This book first published in 1981 explores why it is that the modern built environment while successfully providing material comfort and technical efficiency none the less breeds despair and depression rather than inspires hope and commitment. The source of this paradox where material benefits appear to have been gained only at the expense of intangible values and qualities is found in humanism, the persistent and powerful belief that all problems can be solved through the use of human reason. But humanism has become increasingly confused, rationalistic, callously devoted to efficiency and authoritarian. These confusions and contradictions together with the anti-nature stance of humanism and its failure to teach humane behaviour lead the author to conclude that humanism is best rejected. Such rejection does not advocate the inhuman and anti-human but requires instead a return to the humility that lies at the origin of humanism: a respect for objects, creatures, environments, and people. This environmental humility is explored in the context of individuality of settings, ways of seeing landscapes, appropriation, and ways of building places. This title will be of interest to students of human geography.

Assessing Public Concern for Landscape Quality Arthur W. Magill, 1992

Thoreau's Sense of Place Richard J. Schneider, 2000-05 Recent Thoreau studies have shifted to an emphasis on the green Thoreau, the environmentalist rooted firmly in particular places and interacting with particular objects. In the wake of Buell's Environmental Imagination, the nineteen essayists in this challenging volume address the central questions in Thoreau studies today: how green, how immersed in a sense of place was Thoreau really, and how has this sense of place affected the tradition of nature writing in America? The contributors to this stimulating collection address the ways in which Thoreau and his successors attempt to cope with the basic epistemological split between perceiver and place inherent in writing about nature. Related discussions involve the kinds of discourse most effective for writing about place. They focus on the impact on Thoreau and his successors of culturally constructed assumptions deriving from science, politics, race, gender, history, and literary conventions. Finally, they explore the implications surrounding a writer's appropriation or even exploitation of places and objects.
