Causation and Universals Evan Fales,2002-09-11 The world contains objective causal relations and universals both of which are intimately connected If these claims are true they must have far reaching consequences breathing new life into the theory of empirical knowledge and reinforcing epistemological realism Without causes and universals Professor Fales argues realism is defeated and idealism or scepticism wins Fales begins with a detailed analysis of David Hume s argument that we have no direct experience of necessary connections between events concluding that Hume was mistaken on this fundamental point Then adopting the view of Armstrong and others that causation is grounded in a second order relation between universals he explores a range of topics for which the resulting analysis of causation has systematic implications In particular causal identity conditions for physical universals are proposed which generate a new argument for Platonism The nature of space and time is discussed with arguments against backward causation and for the view that space and time can exist independently of matter or causal process Many of Professor Fales s conclusions seem to run counter to received opinion among contemporary empiricists Yet his method is classically empiricist in spirit and a chief motive for these metaphysical explorations is epistemological The final chapters investigate the perennial question of whether an empiricist internalist and foundational epistemology can support scientific realism

Early Modern Merchants and their Books Angus Vine,2025-07-23 Early Modern Merchants and their Books offers the first dedicated study of the literary and intellectual lives of the merchants of seventeenth century Britain Drawing primarily on unpublished manuscript material but also on a range of rarely discussed printed texts the book reveals for the first time the importance of this mercantile humanism A contribution principally to the field of book history but with significance for early modern literary studies cultural and intellectual history global history and history of science too this volume examines mercantile account books letter books anthologies and manuals as well as mercantile libraries and archives and mercantile poetic and pedagogical works to document this now little known literary and intellectual culture Working across geographical contexts as well as institutional structures the book examines merchants as accountants record keepers authors collectors and compilers and reveals the creative interplay between financial commercial administrative archival memorial and devotional categories and practices in the early modern mercantile world Through a series of mercantile microhistories each based on a single document or group of associated documents the book traces the range and extent of this mercantile humanism and identifies its signature textual and material forms as well as its key subjects and concerns and some of its most important actors Early Modern Merchants and their Books in this way challenges long held assumptions about knowledge making in the seventeenth century and pushes back against equally persistent beliefs about merchants in the period As such it not only offers a revisionist history of the early modern merchantry and a major new account of learning in the seventeenth century but also constitutes a significant methodological intervention in book history itself
