

Each of the tools in this toolkit start with an action or activity, and the facilitator's role is to help participants "unpack" the lessons through dialogue and discussion. The process of unpacking usually follows three basic questions:

- What just happened? (What?) = action and experience
- What does it mean? (So what?) = reflection and generalization
- What will we do about it? (Now what?) = planning and application

This process always applies—whether you are leading a hands-on planting session, a cooking demonstration, a market visit, or facilitating a gender dialogue. The process of facilitating successful adult learning has been broken down into several key steps. Following these steps will help you prepare for and successfully facilitate a session.

Not Just Another Meeting Rodney Napier, Eli Sharp, 2018-11-13 Create a fresh intentional approach to meetings When meetings draw employees away from day to day tasks but fail to reach their intended outcome it has huge costs to the organization All too often this happens because meetings lack purpose people gather together to discuss a problem but don't know how to approach it strategically Consider that the typical leader spends at least 10 hours a week in meetings with an average of five people Now assume each of those individuals is priced out at 100 an hour That's 5 000 a week in meeting costs Multiply that 5 000 by 50 weeks then by the 10 top executives The cost 2 5 million Of course leaders dread the thought of one more ineffective meeting as do most other workers With preparation and intention you can turn these wasted opportunities into sessions that fully engage participants and teams In Not Just Another Meeting Creative Strategies for Facilitation you will learn how to be intentional about diagnosing what your team requires from a meeting By expanding your repertoire of what to do and how to do it you can respond to any situation with calm certainty and creativity Experienced facilitators and consultants Rodney Napier and Eli Sharp describe 13 classic designs such as the Future Search

Collapsing Consensus and Genie in the Bottle Applying to wide ranging workplace issues these designs provide the tools to enable any gathering to solve problems build trust and deal with conflict Accompanying them are animated videos available online that allow you to observe exactly how to facilitate each design This book shines a new light on situations you ve taken for granted for years Break out of your old meeting habits and actually excite the participants of meetings you lead
