

Marxist Theory of Law and State

The initial proponents of Marxist theory were Karl Marx (1818-83), Friedrich Engels (1820-95) and Vladimir Lenin (1870-1924).

The Marxist school of thought is a comprehensive system of thought covering areas of sociology, history, politics, and economics. Embraces all these topics.

Marxist writings on law are sparse, because of the perceived secondary role of law in the Marxist analysis of history and society. There is no comprehensive theory.

Marxist theory is materialist which means that the material conditions of life, i.e economic, physical, environmental are the most important factors in society.

Marx and Engels use the base-superstructure metaphor in this regard when viewing society.

The base consists of the relations of production – work conditions, the division of labour and the ownership of the means of production, which people are involved in to produce life's commodities. Example likes factories and businesses.
