Hofferbert, 1990 Inequality and the Fading of Redistributive Politics Keith Banting, John Myles, 2013-09 All advanced democracies have faced the pressures of globalization technological change and new family forms which have generated higher levels of inequality in market incomes But countries have responded differently reflecting differences in their domestic politics The politics of who gets what and why is at the core of this volume the first to examine this question in an explicitly Canadian context In Inequality and the Fading of Redistributive Politics leading political scientists sociologists and economists point to the failure of public policy to contain surging income inequality Government programs are no longer offsetting the growth in inequality generated by the market and Canadian society has become more unequal The redistributive state is fading due to powerful forces that have reshaped the politics of social policy including global economic pressures ideological change shifts in the influence of business and labour changes in the party system and the decline of equality seeking civil society organizations On one side the organizations that speak for the economic interests of lower income Canadians mobilizing resources expertise and attention on their behalf have been weakened On the other side changes in the distribution of power within our political institutions have made concerted action to tackle inequality more difficult This volume demonstrates conclusively that action and inaction policy change and policy drift are at the heart of growing inequality in Canada Governments have not responded energetically to the evidence and their indifference calls into question Canada's record as a kinder gentler nation

Understanding Dropouts National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Education, Board on Testing and Assessment, Committee on Educational Excellence and Testing Equity, 2001-08-29 The role played by testing in the nation's public school system has been increasing steadily and growing more complicated for more than 20 years The Committee on Educational Excellence and Testing Equity CEETE was formed to monitor the effects of education reform particularly testing on students at risk for academic failure because of poverty lack of proficiency in English disability or membership in population subgroups that have been educationally disadvantaged The committee recognizes the important potential benefits of standards based reforms and of test results in revealing the impact of reform efforts on these students The committee also recognizes the valuable role graduation tests can potentially play in making requirements concrete in increasing the value of a diploma and in motivating students and educators alike to work to higher standards At the same time educational testing is a complicated endeavor that reality can fall far short of the model and that testing cannot by itself provide the desired benefits. If testing is improperly used it can have negative effects such as encouraging school leaving that can hit disadvantaged students hardest. The committee was concerned that the recent proliferation of high school exit examinations could have the unintended effect of increasing dropout rates among students whose rates are already far higher than the average and has taken a close look at what is known about influences on dropout behavior and at the available data on dropouts and school completion.

In Chapters One and Two they define Social Informatics and offer a pragmatic overview of the discipline. In Chapters Three and Four they articulate its fundamental ideas for specific audiences and present important research findings about the personal, social, and organizational consequences of ICT design and use.
