Referring To Space Studies In Austronesian And Papuan Languages:

Referring to Space Gunter Senft, 1997 The first aim of this anthology is to illustrate the variety of resources that Austronesian and Papuan languages offer their speakers for referring to space The languages here described are spread from Madagascar to Tonga and there are many differences between them They also offer a striking contrast to Indo European languages and call into question universalistic claims about human spatial concepts and spatial reference based solely on evidence from Indo European languages and their speakers There are however striking parallels between the kinds of systems that languages offer and that their speakers employ when referring to space Understanding the differences in the ways that coordinate systems are used requires not only linguistic but also cultural historical and geographical knowledge Thus the second aim of the collection is to illustrate the necessity of an interdisciplinary approach to the topic of space if we are to understand the underlying logic of conceptions of space manifest in verbal expressions The first three papers offer overviews of the conception of space in Austronesian languages and analyse the coordinate systems employed for spatial reference The seven papers which follow offer anthropological linguistic descriptions of directionals and locatives in Austronesian and Papuan languages and the last three contributions offer a more structurally oriented perspective Space in Language and Cognition Stephen C. Levinson, 2003-03-20 Languages differ in how they describe space and such differences between languages can be used to explore the relation between language and thought This 2003 book shows that even in a core cognitive domain like spatial thinking language influences how people think memorize and reason about spatial relations and directions After outlining a typology of spatial coordinate systems in language and cognition it is shown that not all languages use all types and that non linguistic cognition mirrors the systems available in the local language The book reports on collaborative interdisciplinary research involving anthropologists linguists and psychologists conducted in many languages and cultures around the world which establishes this robust correlation The overall results suggest that thinking in the cognitive sciences underestimates the transformative power of language on thinking The book will be of interest to linguists psychologists anthropologists and philosophers and especially to students of spatial cognition

The Language of Mathematics Bill Barton, 2007-12-24 The book emerges from several contemporary concerns in mathematics language and mathematics education However the book takes a different stance with respect to language by combining discussion of linguistics and mathematics using examples from each to illustrate the other The picture that emerges is of a subject that is much more contingent much more relative much more subject to human experience than is usually accepted Another way of expressing this is that the thesis of the book takes the idea of mathematics as a human creation and using the evidence from language comes to more radical conclusions than most writers allow

Spatial Expression in Caac Aurélie Cauchard, 2018-07-09 In this study the author describes the linguistic expression of space in Caac an endangered and under documented Oceanic language spoken in New Caledonia from both a descriptive and theoretical perspective Part I provides a concise description of Caac grammar presenting a first formal

Indonesian Houses , 2022-06-20 The traditional houses and settlements of the several hundred ethnic groups of Indonesia are extremely varied and all have their own unique history Underlying this rich diversity are fundamental similarities rooted in the ancient heritage that is shared by all the peoples in the Indonesian field of study The multiplicity of ways in which this heritage is given shape in each local situation bears witness to an amazing creativity in adapting to regional circumstances and social changes Inter ethnic comparison of the architectural structures is a way to arrive at a better understanding of both the shared traditions and the diverging developments In many cases the variety of house forms will reflect successful attempts at one group's making distinct its buildings from those of neighbouring groups in an ongoing ethnic process of what could be called mutual contrasting although sometimes by means of pseudo traditions which have little to do with indigenous customs of the past The contributions to this volume are grouped in four sections The first consists of essays describing approaches to the transformation and variation of houses The second set presents applications of these approaches in case studies of specific Sumatran cultures The third group widens the perspective through the inclusion of a number of cultures from outside Sumatra namely from Flores Sulawesi Kalimantan Palu and Roti The final set deals not so much with houses as with settlements In their pursuit of the cultural dimension of houses the contributions focus on villages and towns exploring their cosmological and symbolic organization

Variation in Indigenous Minority Languages James N. Stanford, Dennis Richard Preston, 2009 Indigenous minority languages have played crucial roles in many areas of linguistics phonetics phonology morphology syntax typology and the ethnography of communication Such languages have however received comparatively little attention from quantitative or variationist sociolinguistics Without the diverse perspectives that underrepresented language communities can provide our understanding of language variation and change will be incomplete To help fill this gap and develop broader viewpoints this anthology presents 21 original fieldwork based studies of a wide range of indigenous languages in the framework of quantitative sociolinguistics The studies illustrate how such understudied communities can provide new insights into language variation and change with respect to socioeconomic status gender age clan lack of a standard exogamy contact with dominant majority languages internal linguistic factors and many other topics
