Children's Spaces Mark Dudek, 2012-05-04 This collection of essays is concerned with the experiences children have within the supervised worlds they inhabit as well as with architecture and landscape architecture International examples of innovative childcare practice are illustrated together with the design processes which informed their development The emphasis here is on new and experimental childcare projects which set out to reassert the rights of children to participate in a complex multi faceted world which is no longer available to them unless under adult supervision Research supports in depth recommendations regarding the ideal children s environment across a range of contexts and dimensions Until recent times the needs of children within the urban environment were largely ignored There is little tradition and no broadly agreed contemporary architectural or landscape theory as to how children should be provided for beyond a limited functional agenda There is a sense that architecture for childhood is not taken seriously it is either whimsical and ephemeral or largely designed for adults an adjunct to the more important business of adult needs and aspirations Yet children access much of their education and development through play and social interaction with their childhood counterparts The spaces in and around childrens daycare centres schools supervised parks and other dedicated childrens environments are the subject of this collection As more and more purpose designed buildings and gardens for children are opened the need to listen to children and their carers is becoming more aparant Mark Dudek gathers together a number of internationally recognized experts in the field of childcare environments to write about different aspects of the landscape They have been chosen in particular because of their background in enquiring research orientated work both theoretical and practical They listen to and watch children

Contributors have considered the child's environment as one which is secure and controlled yet offers additional environmental dimensions which extend developmental possibilities. Children often spend a great deal of time in daycare facilities and schools as parents are absorbed in their own work and leisure activities. This places an emphasis on architects and planners to consider the needs of children in great detail. As such, the child's environment must be conceived of as a rich, complex place, a world within a world. We use the word LANDSCAPE in recognition that children do not differentiate between the inside and the outside; private and public; every part of their perception is open to stimulation by a stimulating environment.

Contemporary Issues in Teaching and Learning Peter Woods, 2013-11-05 Since the 1988 Education Reform Act, our education system has undergone dramatic changes and this in turn has raised a number of controversial issues and questions. This reader brings together key articles, both recently published and specially commissioned, which address these issues and place them in context. Issues covered include the curriculum, teaching and learning, assessment, school effectiveness and improvement. Various themes run throughout the book, including the quest for quality within a social context, the application of theory and research to practice and the positive roles played by both teachers and students in adapting to recent change.

Positive Placements David Midwinter, Tracy Whatmore, 2011-06-02 Equality and Power in Schools Anne Lodge, Kathleen Lynch, 2004-11-23 Based on a study of 12 schools over a two-year period, this book explores issues of equality and power both in the classroom and in the staffroom. Through classroom observation, interviews with pupils and staff, focus groups and questionnaires, the authors examine classroom practice, grouping and streaming, peer group relations and attitudes to power relationships both between pupils and teachers and amongst teachers themselves. They also look particularly at the different experiences of pupils in single-sex and co-educational schools. The authors' findings offer an insight into the way schools operate in terms of social class, gender, religion and ethnicity and raise fundamental questions about the use and abuse of power in schools and how this affects the lives of pupils and staff. This book will be of interest to those studying education, sociology, gender studies and women's studies and to policy makers and teachers in senior management roles.
