Despite the fact that vast engineering networks are the foundations of modern society the services that technology companies provide over them have been a relatively neglected area of study As a result marketing in some technology businesses has been depressingly tactical and inconsistent Marketers with little experience and even less professional training run around presenting PowerPoint decks to each other chasing after the latest fad and throwing erratic changing activities at the market each quarter Many work on the unchallenged assumption that markets are fast changing and that customers only want the lowest prices Yet this industry has liberated human imagination in the internet and convinced the world that they must have a PC and a mobile phone Now as a result of profound relentless global forces some of the leading firms and greatest minds in it are at last turning their attention to service With the advent of cloud computing and radical changes in the engineering of business development with practical projects and exercises that will empower you to learn by doing Quicklet on Geoffrey A. Moore's Crossing the Chasm: Marketing and Selling High Tech Products to Mainstream Customers Richard Childers, 2012-04-04 ABOUT THE BOOK Since its first publication in 1991 Geoffrey Moore's Crossing the Chasm Marketing and Selling High Tech Products to Mainstream Customers has set the standard for tech business moguls In fact it has become the standard for all of us trying to make our way in the confusing world of technology business Moore argues that there is a chasm that exists between early adopters of a potentially disruptive technology product and what he calls the early majority or the market segment that takes such a product to the upper ranges of success Moore believes that early adopters and visionaries have very different expectations than the pragmatists that follow In this book he explores those differences and suggests specific techniques to successfully cross the chasm These include choosing a target market understanding the whole product concept positioning the product building a successful marketing strategy and choosing the most appropriate distribution channel and pricing MEET THE AUTHOR Richard Childers is an experienced writer and a member of the Hyperink Team which works hard to bring you high quality engaging fun content Happy reading EXCERPT FROM THE BOOK Moore's major thesis is that there is something wrong with the High Tech Marketing Model There are gaps separating the major groups described in the Technology Adoption Life Cycle These gaps represent the fact that any group will have a hard time accepting a new product if it is marketed to them in the same manner it was marketed to the group that preceded them Each of these gaps is an opportunity for marketing to lose momentum and miss the transition to the next group Two of these gaps are relatively small what Moore calls cracks in the bell curve The gap between innovators and early adopters occurs when a hot new technology product cannot be transitioned into a major new benefit The enthusiast loves it for its architecture but nobody can even figure out how to start using it There is a second crack of similar size that exists between the early majority and the late majority It comes at a time in the product life cycle when the market is well developed and the technology product is in the mainstream While the early majority was quite willing and able to achieve the level of technical competence required to gain benefit from the product the late majority user is much less so In order to continue developing their market by moving into the late majority segment the product marketers must make the product easier to use and implement If they fail to do so they may fail in their attempts to transition to this next segment CHAPTER OUTLINE Quicklet on Geoffrey A.
