Marshall Plan For The 1990s An International Roundtable On World Economic Development:

A Marshall Plan for the 1990s Charles A. Cerami, 1989 This symposium of papers by statesmen and leading experts from around the world examines the global economic situation and voices concern about the potential for world unemployment and trade crisis in the 1990s A new Marshall Plan would involve a concerted worldwide effort to improve the situation This plan was first formulated by Charles A Cerami while undertaking a study of the global trade picture for the United States Departments of State Treasury and Commerce Meeting with scores of diplomats and policy makers in some forty countries Cerami sought possible solutions to economic problems on the global level Each of the contributors to this volume is among the best in the field each is important in the world mechanism of government and politics This anthology is an important tool in the effort to promote a working consensus among the leaders of different nationalities and political benefits to plan for economic development The Marshall Plan would consist of the radical solution of a vast expansion of the number and size of markets and therefore of the quantity of products to be absorbed Since the economies of the developed world the United States Europe Japan and Asia already absorb a great deal the major effort would be to develop more markets in Third World nations Students and scholars of business and economics as well as international business people will find A Marshall Plan for the 1990s a thought provoking study

Global Marshall Plan James A. Yunker, 2014-08-14 Today's foreign aid programs are small scale because of the widespread belief that they are ineffective This could be an example of a self fulfilling prophecy small scale virtually guarantees ineffectiveness However the pervasive contemporary pessimism regarding global economic inequality is most likely unfounded The research described in this book suggests that a properly designed and sufficiently massive economic development assistance project a Global Marshall Plan could tremendously reduce the economic gap between the richest and poorest nations within a 50 year planning period Enrichment of the poor nations would not entail impoverishment of the rich nations The actual cost of the GMP program to the populations of the rich nations would be a very slight and virtually unnoticeable reduction in the rate of growth of their living standards The model incorporates features suggested by the skeptical literature on foreign aid and it is shown that if certain key parameter values are sufficiently adverse the GMP would indeed be ineffective However extensive sensitivity analysis demonstrates that the optimistic benchmark results are robust against wide variations in the numerical values of most model parameters The fundamental policy implication of this research is that only an actual real world experiment with a Global Marshall Plan could reliably determine whether or not it would be successful
