Redesigning Schools Joseph P. McDonald, 1996-11-22 For five years McDonald charted the progress of ten schools in the Coalition of Essential Schools as they immersed themselves in the hard work of school reform He also visited many other schools both elementary and secondary in an attempt to understand serious school reform and its prospects He concludes that school reform requires redesign in three critical areas The first is a shift in the ordinary and often tacit beliefs of the people who work in schools the communities that support them and even the children who attend them The second area which McDonald dubs the wiring arena involves internal communication and power arrangements The third area called tuning involves connecting the school to the needs interests and values of the communities it serves Redesigning Accountability Systems for Education Susan Fuhrman, Richard F.

Four specific change strategies are evaluated as well task force top down piloting and family style The low status of teacher educators and the excessive regulation of teacher education are also examined as is the failure to give adequate attention to the administrative organization for teacher education

Handbook of the Sociology of Education Maureen T. Hallinan, 2006-11-24 The aim of the Handbook of Sociology of Education is to present the most theoretically grounded and empirically rigorous sociological analyses of schools to date The authors are distinguished researchers in the field Their contributions to the Handbook offer major theoretical perspectives on the schooling process and describe significant empirical studies of schools and their effects on individuals and society The research presented in the Handbook is built on three fundamental tenets of sociology First the authors adopt the perspective that schools are a central institution in society An understanding of the function of schooling in social life is enhanced by viewing schools as interrelated with other societal institutions The study of how the context of schooling influences education processes is critical to an understanding of school outcomes Rather than being determined solely by ascribed and achieved characteristics an individual's cognitive and social development are influenced heavily by the structures and networks in which the individual is embedded. Communities, families, schools, and social groups are critical elements in the educative process. By viewing the school as a societal institution and highlighting the interaction between context and individual behavior, the Handbook chapters provide a broader and deeper understanding of the determinants of learning in contemporary society. The second sociological insight that guides the research in the Handbook is that the school is a social system. Rethinking US

Education Policy: 2003 Diane Ravitch, 2010-12-01 In 1983 the seminal report issued by the National Commission on Excellence in Education A Nation at Risk charged that most American high schoolers were following a general course of instruction choosing neither the college preparatory track nor the vocational option This pattern the report complained had fostered low expectations and a curricular hodge podge of classes that failed to prepare students for college or work The commission called on states to implement academic requirements for all students regardless of background including four years of English and three years each of science mathematics and social studies Students should not be sorted by their presumed future destinations the commission reasoned but should be offered an equal opportunity to get a high quality education to fit them either for postsecondary education or the modern workplace Two decades after the commission called on states to reform the high school environment and raise graduation requirements the Brown Center on Education Policy at the Brookings Institution convened a group of prominent scholars to explore the current state of America's high schools focusing on new research about reforming these institutions that are so important in the lives of the nation's adolescents The questions considered reflected the diversity of the participants and covered a variety of areas historical international sociological and practical Data gathered by the U S Department of Education show students today are taking many more advanced courses in mathematics and the sciences while at the same time test scores do not reflect the increases in enrollments in academic courses In addition large score gaps remain among students from different social groups Reform of the high schools must take into account the elementary and middle schools that prepare students and the postsecondary institutions to which students aspire Adolescent culture and students' views about school and academic work play important roles in student achievement as do the family and contemporary society in shaping of adolescent behavior No matter their background all participants agreed that the key to a successful high school rests with the extent to which it recognizes and strengthens its commitment to the intellectual growth of its students schools and individuals such as Archbishop Hughes of New York Clearly this is an area rich in ideas rife with controversy and vital in its outcome for individuals and the nation as a whole And yet strangely enough there exists no major encyclopedia bringing the varied strands together in one place as a ready reference for scholars teachers school administrators and students studying to enter the educational profession This two volume work is intended to be that authoritative resource Key themes and topics include biographies of reformers and dissenters theoretical and ideological perspectives key programs and legislation judicial verdicts impacting educational change in America the politics and processes of educational reform and policy making dissent and resistance to reform technology s impact on educational reform A Reader s Guide in the front matter groups entries around such themes to help readers find related entries more easily

Kemerer,2010-01-01 Educational policy in a democracy goes beyond teaching literacy and numeracy It also supports teaching moral reasoning political tolerance respect for diversity and citizenship Education policy should encourage liberty and equality of opportunity hold educational institutions accountable and be efficient School Choice Tradeoffs examines the tradeoffs among these goals when government affords parents the means to select the schools their children attend Godwin and Kemerer compare current policy that uses family residence to assign students to schools with alternative policies that range from expanding public choice options to school vouchers They identify the benefits and costs of each policy approach through a review of past empirical literature the presentation of new empirical work and legal and philosophic analysis The authors offer a balanced perspective that goes beyond rhetoric and ideology to offer policymakers and the public insight into the complex tradeoffs that are inherent in the design and implementation of school choice policies While all policies create
