Thurman tells the sweeping story of Black musicians in German speaking Europe over more than a century Thurman brings to life the incredible musical interactions and transnational collaborations among people of African descent and white Germans and Austrians Through this compelling history she explores how people reinforced or challenged racial identities in the concert hall Throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries audiences assumed the categories of Blackness and Germanness were mutually exclusive Yet on attending a performance of German music by a Black musician many listeners were surprised to discover that German identity is not a biological marker but something that could be learned performed and mastered While Germans and Austrians located their national identity in music championing composers such as Bach Beethoven and Brahms as national heroes the performance of their works by Black musicians complicated the public's understanding of who had the right to play them Audiences wavered between seeing these musicians as the rightful heirs of Austro-German musical culture and dangerous outsiders to it Thurman explores the tension between the supposedly transcendental powers of classical music and the global conversations that developed about who could perform it An interdisciplinary and transatlantic history Singing Like Germans suggests that listening to music is not a passive experience but an active process where racial and gendered categories are constantly made and unmade The Exhibitor ,1947 Some

World reassesses the legacy of one of America's best loved composers at a pivotal moment as his life and work shift from the realm of personal memory to that of history This collection of seventeen essays by distinguished scholars of American music explores the stages of cultural change on which Copland's long life 1900 to 1990 unfolded from the modernist experiments of the 1920s through the progressive populism of the Great Depression and the urgencies of World War II to postwar political backlash and the rise of serialism in the 1950s and the cultural turbulence of the 1960s. Continually responding to an ever-changing political and cultural panorama, Copland kept a firm focus on both his private muse and the public he served. No self-absorbed recluse, he was very much a public figure who devoted his career to building support systems to help composers function productively in America. This book critiques Copland's work in these shifting contexts. The topics include Copland's role in shaping an American school of modern dance, his relationship with Leonard Bernstein, his homosexuality especially as influenced by the writings of Andr  Gide, and explorations of cultural nationalism. Copland's rich correspondence with the composer and critic Arthur Berger, who helped set the parameters of Copland's reception, is published here in its entirety, edited by Wayne Shirley. The contributors include Emily Abrams, Paul Anderson, Elliott Antokoletz, Leon Botstein, Martin Brody, Elizabeth Crist, Morris Dickstein, Lynn Garafola, Melissa de Graaf, Neil Lerner, Gail Levin, Beth Levy, Vivian Perlis, Howard Pollack, and Larry Starr.
