Engen, E. and Engen, T. 1983: Rhode Island Test of Language Structure. Baltimore: University Park Press.

Two important facts which the title of this test does not reveal are that it is restricted to language comprehension, and that it is standardized on a group of hearing-impaired subjects. These two facts are of course connected: the oral language of the hearing-impaired when they enter school and need to be assessed, can be at a low level, which means that tests which focus on understanding are much more likely to furnish useful information about placement. The test focuses via a picture verification task exclusively on grammatical contrasts; its historical antecedents thus go back, via for example Miller and Yoder (1985, a revision of their 1972 version) to Fraser et al. (1963). For readers not familiar with this approach, perhaps an example from the test would be helpful. The child is asked to look carefully at a set of three line drawings which illustrate a) a man washing a car, b) the same man (so far as it is possible to tell — the drawings are not of good quality) washing the floor and c) a woman washing the same car as in picture (a). The child is asked by the examiner to point to the picture that is 'the same as what I said'. In this instance the sentence to be matched with a picture is 'The car is washed by father'. In all 20 different grammatical structures are tested, covering a range of simple and complex sentence patterns. For each structure there are five separate instances, so there are 100 items on the test.

The Rhode Island Test of Language Structure (RITLS) was initially piloted on 91 normal hearing kindergarten children with a mean age of 5 years 6 months, and on 69 hearing-impaired children, ranging in age from 5 to 16 years, from the Rhode Island School for the Deaf. The standardization sample involved 364 hearing-impaired children and 283 children with normal hearing. Results are reported for the two groups separately. The authors indicate that the study was first developed as a criterion-referenced test on which normative data was subsequently obtained.

The manual for the test is clearly written and reasonably full,

Rhode Island Test of Language Structure Elizabeth Engen, Trygg Engen, 1983 Rhode Island Test of Language Structure Elizabeth Engen, 1983 Educational and Developmental Aspects of Deafness Donald F. Moores, 1990

Educational and Developmental Aspects of Deafness details the ongoing revolution in the education of deaf children. More than 20 researchers contributed their discoveries in anthropology, education, linguistics, psychology, sociology, and other major disciplines with special concentration upon the education of deaf children. Divided into two parts on education at home and in school, this incisive book documents breakthroughs such as the public's interest in sign language, the increasing availability of interpreters, the growing perception of deafness as a social condition not a pathology, and other positive trends. It is unique as the first purely research-based text and reference point for further study of the education of deaf children. The Special

Handbook of Sign Language Pedagogy is the first reference of its kind, presenting contributions from leading experts in the field of sign language pedagogy. The Handbook fills a significant gap in the growing field of sign language pedagogy, compiling all essential aspects of current trends and empirical research in teaching, curricular design, and assessment in one volume. Each chapter includes historical perspectives, core issues, research approaches, key findings, pedagogical implications, future research direction, and additional references. The Routledge Handbook of Sign Language Pedagogy is an essential reference for sign language teachers, practitioners, and researchers in applied sign linguistics and first, second, and additional language learning. Uniquely Human Philip Lieberman, 1991. In a stimulating synthesis of cognitive science, anthropology, and linguistics, Philip Lieberman tackles the fundamental questions of human nature: How and why are human beings so different from other species? Can the Darwinian theory of evolution explain human linguistic and cognitive ability? How do our processes of language and thought differ from those of Homo erectus 500,000 years ago or of the Neanderthals 35,000 years ago? What accounts for human moral sense? Lieberman believes that evolution for rapid, efficient vocal communication forged modern human beings by creating the modern human brain. Earlier hominids lacked fully human speech and syntax, which together allow us to convey complex thoughts rapidly. The author discusses how natural selection acted on older brain mechanisms to produce a structure that can regulate the motor activity necessary for speech and command the complex syntax that enhances the creativity of human language. The unique brain mechanisms underlying human language also enhance human cognitive ability allowing us to derive abstract concepts and to plan complex activities These factors are necessary for the development of true altruism and moral behavior Lieberman supports his argument about the evolution of speech and the human brain by combining the comparative method of Charles Darwin insights from archaeology and child development and the results of high tech research with computerized brain scanning and computer models that can recreate speech sounds made by our ancestors over 100 000 years ago Uniquely Human will stimulate fresh thought and controversy on the basic question of how we came to be Library of Congress Subject Headings Library of Congress,2013

Literacy and Deaf People Brenda Jo Brueggemann, 2004 This compelling collection advocates for an alternative view of deaf people's literacy one that emphasizes recent shifts in Deaf cultural identity rather than a student's past educational context as determined by the dominant hearing society. Divided into two parts, the book opens with four chapters by leading scholars Tom Humphries, Claire Ramsey, Susan Burch, and volume editor Brenda Jo Brueggemann. These scholars use diverse disciplines to reveal how schools where deaf children are taught are the product of ideologies about teaching about how deaf children learn and about the relationship of ASL and English. Part Two features works by Elizabeth Engen and Trygg Engen, Tane Akamatsu and Ester Cole, Lillian Buffalo Tompkins, Sherman Wilcox and BoMee Corwin, and Kathleen M. Wood. The five chapters contributed by these noteworthy researchers offer various views on multicultural and bilingual literacy instruction for deaf students. Subjects range from a study of literacy in Norway where Norwegian Sign Language recently became the first language of instruction for deaf pupils to the difficulties faced by deaf immigrant and refugee children who confront institutional and cultural clashes. Other topics include the experiences of deaf adults who became bilingual in ASL and English and the interaction of the pathological versus the cultural view of deafness. The final study examines literacy among Deaf college undergraduates as a way of determining how the current social institution of literacy translates for Deaf adults and how literacy can be extended to deaf people beyond the age of 20.
