Gergen, 2009-07-30 This book builds on two current developments in psychology scholarship and practice The first centers on broad discontent with the individualist tradition in which the rational agent or autonomous self is considered the fundamental atom of social life Critique of individualism spring not only from psychologists working in the academy but also from communities of therapy and counseling The second and related development from which this work builds is the search for alternatives to individualist understanding Thus therapists such as Steve Mitchell along with feminists at the Stone Center expand the psychoanalytic tradition to include a relational orientation to therapy The present volume will give voice to the critique of individualism but its major thrust is to develop and illustrate a far more radical and potentially exciting landscape of relational thought and practice that now exists Most existing attempts to build a relational foundation remain committed to a residual form of individualist psychology The present work carves out a space of understanding in which relational process stands prior to the very concept of the individual More broadly the book attempts to develop a thoroughgoing relational account of human activity In doing so Gergen reconstitutes the mind as a manifestation of relationships and bears out these ideas in a range of everyday professional practices including family therapy collaborative classrooms and organizational psychology

The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts.
