Tabatabai Asbaghi, 1997 Born in 1911 in Paris Louise Bourgeois was raised in a household that famously included her father's mistress who was also Louise's nanny. She studied philosophy and mathematics before turning to art in 1934 and over the next few years studied at various art academies and in the atelier of Fernand Léger among others. She moved to New York in 1938 with her new husband, American art historian Robert Goldwater. Her first U.S. showing was in a print exhibit at the Brooklyn Museum and over the next 50 years she exhibited consistently in solo and group shows. In 1982 Bourgeois was the subject of the first retrospective ever given to a woman artist at The Museum of Modern Art, New York, and her work has remained in the spotlight ever since.

Louise Bourgeois Louise Bourgeois, 2003 There is a constant desire to manipulate instead of being manipulated. Art is manipulation without any intervention. So said Louise Bourgeois in a 1988 statement and so she has attempted to do throughout her life's work which continues to this day. This modest yet comprehensive volume reveals Bourgeois' Life as Art, reproducing a range of work from throughout her career alongside a selection of photographs, incisive essays, and an illustrated biography.

Louise Bourgeois Robert

Pincus-Witten, 2014 Along with a group of drawings from the 1940s in which pendulous forms are delineated in black ink, the selection of works presented in this volume demonstrates the myriad ways in which Louise Bourgeois approached material form and scale. They also affirm the various readings of Bourgeois's work, whether formal, psychological, biographical, or experiential. For Bourgeois, the sculpture's suspension is an expression of the psyche as she stated: "Horizontal is a desire to give up to sleep. Vertical is an attempt to escape. Hanging and floating are states of ambivalence. In psychology, ambivalence refers to conflicting but coexisting feelings for the same person, place, or event. The many dualities at play within Bourgeois's oeuvre—organic, geometric, rigid, pliable, male, female—provide this condition with fertile ground."
