1766-1866 Allen Wilson Porterfield, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1914 edition Excerpt SECTION VIII THE SIDE LIGHTS Strictly speaking literary schools have not been numerous in Germany There have not been many instances where a number of poets more than two holding a common doctrine accepting the same teachings exhibiting in practice the same general methods and intellectual bent have banded together and made propaganda for a common cause The very fact that a man is a poet is proof positive that he is different from other men including other poets and there never were even two poets exactly or even nearly alike To have a successful school there must be good teamwork and to have this a long series of similarities on the part of the participants is necessary We can speak of the First Silesian School 1625 75 the Second Silesian School 1650 1700 the c otthtger ain 1767 1800 Storm and Stress 1767 87 the Berlin Jena Romantic School 1798 1801 the Heidelberg Romantic School 1806 08 and Young Germany 1830 48 with more or less propriety and with that the list of schools is about complete Goethe and Schiller established a Classical School 1794 1805 at Weimar only in the sense that they wrote poetry of a high order which found many imitators and many more readers and admirers But it is with a school as with a triangle or with jealousy it requires three parts to complete it And then a school is unlike a triangle or jealousy in that more than three parts will tend to make it more nearly perfect more enduring and effective In the case of the twenty eight poets grouped under this rubric we have to do with a number of men each one of whom went his own way and accomplished something that makes him unforgettable They lived in the age of Romanticism and were not merely influenced
