

A painting of a street scene at dusk or dawn. A large, intense fire is burning in the center of the road, with thick black smoke rising into the sky. Several cars are visible: a red car on the left, a blue car in the center, and a dark car on the right. The street is wet, reflecting the light. In the background, there are trees and a building. The overall mood is dramatic and somber.

Québec Studies in the Philosophy of Science Mathieu Marion, Robert S. Cohen, 2012-12-06 By North American standards philosophy is not new in Quebec the first mention of philosophy lectures given by a Jesuit in the College de Quebec founded 1635 dates from 1665 and the oldest logic manuscript dates from 1679 In English speaking universities such as McGill founded 1829 philosophy began to be taught later during the second half of the 19th century The major influence on English speaking philosophers was at least initially that of Scottish Empiricism On the other hand the strong influence of the Catholic Church on French Canadian society meant that the staff of the facultes of the French speaking universities consisted until recently almost entirely of Thomist philosophers There was accordingly little or no work in modern Formal Logic and Philosophy of Science and precious few contacts between the philosophical communities In the late forties Hugues Leblanc was a young student wanting to learn

Formal Logic He could not find anyone in Quebec to teach him and he went to study at Harvard University under the supervision of W V Quine His best friend Maurice L Abbe had left a year earlier for Princeton to study with Alonzo Church After receiving his Ph D from Harvard in 1948 Leblanc started his professional career at Bryn Mawr College where he stayed until 1967 He then went to Temple University where he taught until his retirement in 1992 serving as Chair of the Department of Philosophy from 1973 until 1979
