Screening For Biological Response Modifiers:

Screening for Biological Response Modifiers: Methods and Rationale James E. Talmadge, Isaiah J. Fidler, R.K. Oldham, 2012-12-06 The observation in the 1950s that nitrogen mustard and other toxic chemicals could induce antitumor responses in patients with refractory lymphoma initiated a massive search for active chemotherapeutic agents The initial observations stimulated a search for new chemotherapeutic agents which might have increased antitumor activity with less toxicity for normal tissues To aid in the search for these new chemicals and to attempt to distinguish among the many toxic chemicals which might be candidates for clinical studies the National Cancer Institute the pharmaceutical industry and the cancer research laboratories of most Western nations developed systems for screening drugs for antitumor activity Perhaps the most extensive screening program was established by the National Cancer Institute 1 This screening program has evolved over the last two decades an evolution which has been repeatedly reviewed 2 5 Various screening programs in use have examined over 500 000 compounds as potential anticancer agents From these there are now approximately forty anticancer drugs in clinical use The utility of these compounds and their toxicities have been reviewed on many occasions It is now apparent that more active and less toxic anticancer drugs are needed It is also clear that the current screening programs are identifying compounds with similar levels of activity and with continuing moderate to severe toxicity 6

Immunomodulation of Neoplasia J. M. Cruse, 1988 Cancer Treatment Reports, 1986 Research Awards Index, 1981 Referral Guidelines for Funding Components of PHS, National Cancer Institute Monograph National Cancer Institute (U.S.), 1983 Infections in the Immunocompromised Host Paul Actor, Alan Evangelista, James Poupard, Eileen Hinks, 2012-12-06 The subject matter of this volume the basis for which was a conference held in Philadelphia which focused on the subject of infections including their diagnosis and treatment in immunocompromised individuals The material is of particular importance today when placed against the background of the rapid spread of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome AIDS The first section dealt with the general subject of the immunocompromised host Here reviewed in detail were the epidemiological and clinical aspects of opportunistic infections in patients with defective immune responses It is widely acknowledged that infections are a major complication of the neoplastic process Cancer bearing patients are more prone to certain kinds of infectious and cancer chemotherapy almost always increases susceptibility to such infections Depending upon the basic disease process of the cancer a specific array of infectious diseases can be predicted Patients altered in thymus derived lymphocyte populations or mononuclear phagocyte capabilities resulting in defects in cell mediated immunity or delayed hypersensitivity become highly susceptible to certain groups of organisms whereas profoundly neutropenic patients usually become infected with different organisms The types of infections noted are relatively predictable for the type of immune defect with some variations according to epidemiological factors Major advances have been made in the early diagnosis and treatment of infectious complications with increasingly effective antimicrobial agents and increasing knowledge of their use The application of so called preventive procedures has had limited value to date including immunotherapy which appears to hold much promise

Cancer on Trial Peter Keating,Alberto Cambrosio,2014-04-18

There were no medical oncologists until a few decades ago In the early 1960s not only were there no such specialists many practitioners regarded the treatment of terminally ill cancer patients with heroic courses of chemotherapy as highly questionable Physicians loath to assign patients randomly to competing treatments also expressed their outright opposition to the randomized clinical trials that were then relatively rare And yet today these trials form the basis of medical oncology How did such a spectacular change occur How did medical oncology move from a non entity and in some regards a reviled practice to the central position it now occupies in modern medicine Cancer on Trial answers these questions by exploring how practitioners established a new style of practice at the center of which lies the cancer clinical trial

Biochemistry and Molecular Genetics of Cancer Metastasis Karoly Lapis,L.A. Liotta,A.S. Rabson,2012-12-06

The success rate for treatment of primary neoplasms has improved significantly due to improved surgical radiotherapy and chemotherapy methods and by supportive patient care In contrast the treatment of cancer metastases the cause of most cancer deaths has not been very successful Approximately 50% or more of patients with primary malignant neoplasms already have established metastases Consequently the most important problem in cancer treatment is the destruction or prevention of metastases Metastases research has obvious clinical importance Yet it has only been recently that investigators have attempted to study the mechanisms involved in this process This is in part due to the complexity of metastases formation A metastatic colony is the result of a complicated series of steps involving multiple tumor host interactions It is expected that multiple biochemical factors and gene products derived both from the host and the tumor cell may be required for the metastasizing tumor cell to invade survive host defenses travel in the circulation arrest and adhere in the target organ invade out and grow as a metastatic colony Some of these factors have recently been identified by investigators who have focused on individual steps in the metastatic process and have employed new technologies in immunology biochemistry and molecular biology The purpose of this volume is to capture some of the excitement in the field of metastases based on such new discoveries

Goldenberg, 2012-12-06 Where do you begin to look for a recent authoritative article on the diagnosis or management of a particular malignancy The few general oncology text books are generally out of date Single papers in specialized journals are informative but seldom comprehensive these are more often preliminary reports on a very limited number of patients Certain general journals frequently publish good in depth reviews of cancer topics and published symposium lectures are often the best overviews available Unfortunately these reviews and supplements appear sporadically and the reader can never be sure when a topic of special interest will be covered Cancer Treatment and Research is a series of authoritative volumes that aim to meet this need It is an attempt to establish a critical mass of oncology literature covering virtually all oncology topics revised frequently to keep the coverage up to date and easily available on a single library shelf or by a single personal subscription We have approached the problem in the following fashion first by dividing the oncology literature into specific subdivisions such as lung cancer genitourinary cancer pediatric oncology etc and second by asking eminent authorities in each of these areas to edit a volume on the specific topic on an annual or biannual basis Each topic and tumor type is covered in a volume appearing frequently and predictably discussing current diagnosis staging markers all forms of treatment modalities basic biology and more
