Fred Alford,2018-10-18 C Fred Alford interviewed working people prisoners and college students in order to discover how people experience evil in themselves in others and in the world What people meant by evil he found was a profound inchoate feeling of dread so overwhelming that they tried to inflict it on others to be rid of it themselves A leather jacketed emergency medical technician for example one of the many young people for whom vampires are oddly seductive icons of evil said he would give anything to be a vampire Drawing on psychoanalytic theory Alford argues that the primary experience of evil is not moral but existential The problems of evil are complicated by the terror it evokes a threat to the self so profound it tends to be isolated deep in the mind Alford suggests an alternative to this bleak vision The exercise of imagination in particular imagination that takes the form of a shared narrative offers an active and practical alternative to the contemporary experience of evil Our society suffers from a paucity of shared narratives and the creative imagination they inspire

Forensic Psychiatry Tom Mason,2007-11-05 An international panel of experts from diverse specialties examine the idea of evil in a medical context specifically a mental health setting to consider how the concept can be usefully interpreted and to elucidate its relationship to forensic psychiatry The authors challenge the belief that the concept of evil plays no role in scientific psychiatry and is not helpful to our understanding of aberrant human thinking and behavior Among the viewpoints up for debate are a consideration of organizations as evil structures the medicalization of evil destruction as a constructive choice violence as a secular evil talking about evil when it is not supposed to exist and the influence of evil on forensic clinical practice Among the highlights are a psychological exploration of the notion of evil and a variety of interesting research methods used to explore the nature of evil New Outlook ,1899
