Muslim Civic Cultures and Conflict Resolution John N. Paden, 2006-03-30

The question of whether Islam is compatible with democracy may best be answered not from the classical sources or even from the cauldron of Middle East politics but from the lived experiences of Muslim communities around the world. Regardless of their cultural context, transitions from military to civilian rule require attention to the grassroots civic cultures that form the foundations of democratic federalism. John Paden, a noted expert on West African and Islamic societies, uses Nigeria as a critical case study of how a diverse country with a significant Muslim population is working to make the transition to a democratic society. The book provides an essential context to the current international concern with issues ranging from Shari'a law and communal violence to the broader war on terrorism. It argues that the requirement for regional political cooperation serves as a counterbalance to more extreme forms of political expression. Paden shows that if the Nigerian political model of Olusegun Obasanjo, Nigeria, and Indira Gandhi, India, achieved the pinnacle of political power, fell from or relinquished power, and then after a period in the political wilderness regained it. By placing greater emphasis than that customarily accorded by biographers on the interment that followed their fall and preceded their resurrection, the book describes how what they did, the lessons they learned, and the mistakes made by their successors facilitated their reentry.
