

Breastfeeding positions

You don't have to breastfeed in one position! Try these different options!

Cradle

Put your baby's head resting into the bend of your elbow on the side where you will be feeding your baby. Use the rest of that arm to support the baby's body. Cup your breast with your other hand and lightly compress your breast so the nipple points toward your baby's nose. When baby opens wide you are ready to latch.

Cross cradle

Hold your baby's head with the hand opposite to the breast which you will be nursing from. So if you are nursing from the left breast, support the head with your right hand. Cup the breast as above to get ready for baby's latch.

Laid back

Lay down in a semi-reclined position with your baby tummy-to-tummy with you. You can then guide them to your breast.

Football

This takes pressure away from your belly so is good if you have had a C-section. Hold your baby at your side, facing you, with their legs tucked under your arm like a football.

Side lying

Lie on your side facing your baby with one pillow under your head and one behind your back. Have a rolled-up towel or baby blanket within your reach. Put your baby on her side, facing you, with your nipple in line with her nose. Pull her feet and bottom in close. Lean back onto the pillow behind you until your nipple lifts off the bed to the level of your baby's mouth. Latch baby while gently pressing the palm of your hand between her shoulder blades to help her. Wedge the towel or blanket behind her back, leaving her head free to tilt back.
