Decoding a Royal Marine Commando

Mark Burchell,2018-10-25 With a heritage dating back to the mid seventeenth century the Royal Marines have accrued a rich history of rituals artefacts and material culture that is consciously deployed in order to define and shape the institution both historically and going forward into an uncertain future Drawing upon this heritage Mark Burchell offers a unique method of understanding how the Royal Marines draw upon this material culture in order to help transform ordinary labour power to political agency comprising acts of controlled and sustained violence He demonstrates how a barrage of objects and items including uniforms weapons landscapes architecture personal kit drills rituals and iconography are deployed in order successfully to integrate the recruits into the Royal Marines culture It is argued that this material culture is a vital tool with which to imprint the military's own image on new recruits as they embark on a process of de individualisation Having been granted unprecedented access to the Commando Training Centre at Lympstone as an anthropologist Burchell observed an intake of recruits throughout their demanding and exhausting year long training programme The resulting book presents to the academic community for the first time a theorised in depth account of a relatively unexplored social community and how its material culture creates and reifies new military identities This path breaking interdisciplinary analysis provides fresh understanding of the multiple processes of military enculturation through a meticulous revision of the relationships that exist between disciplinary and punishment practices violence and masculinity narratives and personhood and will explore how these issues are understood by recruits through their practical application of body to physical labour and by the cues of their surrounding material culture

By Sea and Land Robin Neillands,2004-03-01 This is the story of a fighting force In the words of the marines themselves Robin Neillands formerly of 45 Commando RM describes what it is really like to wear the legendary green beret in peace and in war This vivid account charts the story of the Royal Marine Commandos from their bloody baptism on the beaches of Dieppe to the final yomp into Stanley at the end of the Falklands War in 1982

Decoding a Royal Marine Commando Mark A. Burchell,2018 With a heritage dating back to the mid seventeenth century the Royal Marines have accrued a rich history of rituals artefacts and material culture that is consciously deployed in order to define and shape the institution both historically and going forward into an uncertain future Drawing upon this heritage Mark Burchell offers a unique method of understanding how the Royal Marines draw upon this material culture in order to help transform ordinary labour power to political agency comprising acts of controlled and sustained violence He demonstrates how a barrage of objects and items including uniforms weapons landscapes architecture personal kit drills rituals and iconography are deployed in order successfully to integrate the recruits into the Royal Marines culture It is argued that this material culture is a vital tool with which to imprint the military's own image on new recruits as they embark on a process of de-individualisation

D-Day Commando Ken Ford,2003 48 Royal Marine Commando began its life in March 1944 and was disbanded in the UK less than two years later in January 1946 In its short but active life it always seemed to be in the thick of the fighting In fact a history of 48 RM Commando is a history of the last year of the war in Europe It participated in the D Day invasion and landed on Juno Beach on 6 June 1944 fought as infantry in the bloody battles for Normandy helped clear the Channel ports undertook a second amphibious landing during the Walcheren campaign raided across the Maas in Holland and then took part in the army of occupation in Germany During the whole of this period it was in almost continuous contact with the enemy It is surprising then that the story of 48 RM Commando has not been made available to a wider audience Apart from a small booklet written by one of its veterans and published in 1946 it has never been the subject of a complete history of its own Based on eyewitness accounts official unit war diaries and published and unpublished sources and supported by a selection of maps line drawings and archive photographs this is a gripping and authoritative history of an elite formation
