Conserving Bird Biodiversity Ken Norris, Deborah J. Pain, 2002-06-06 The earth's biodiversity currently faces an extinction crisis that is unprecedented. Conservationists attempt to intervene in the extinction process either locally by protecting or restoring important species and habitats or at national and international levels by influencing key policies and promoting debate. Reliable information is the foundation upon which these efforts are based, which places research at the heart of biodiversity conservation. The role of research in such conservation is diverse. It includes understanding why biodiversity is important, defining units of biodiversity, priority setting for species and sites, managing endangered and declining populations, understanding large scale processes, making predictions about the future, and interfacing with training, education, public awareness, and policy initiatives. Using examples from a wide range of bird conservation work worldwide, researchers consider the principles underlying these issues and illustrate how these principles have been applied to address actual conservation problems for students, practitioners, and researchers in conservation biology.

Seabird Populations of Britain and Ireland P. Ian Mitchell, 2004. This book summarises the findings of Seabird 2000, a major national initiative to census all the breeding seabirds in Britain and Ireland, which incorporates the work of over 400 individuals counting seabird numbers and coastal and inland sites over 15 years. There is an account for each breeding species with text by a specialist author discussing distributional characteristics and changes. There are 2 maps per species, one pinpointing each breeding colony and another expressing expansion, decline, extinction, and new colonization. The British Isles are of global importance for breeding seabirds: over 4 million pairs from 25 species breed here, including almost all of the world's Manx Shearwaters and Northern Gannets. This is a readable and comprehensive distillation of the most exhaustive and detailed survey of seabird numbers in Britain ever conducted. It will be a fascinating read for all birders and an essential resource for everyone involved in the conservation of the marine environment.

Manx Bird Atlas Christopher Martyn Sharpe, 2007. The Manx Bird Atlas project was established to undertake the first comprehensive survey of all bird species to be found on the Island during both the winter and summer. During the five-year programme of work, professional ornithologists surveyed the entire Island using new and innovative survey techniques. The survey, which ran from 1998 to 2003, is the most detailed of its kind ever undertaken in Europe. Such methods have generated data that provides distribution and abundant information for 150 species. Beautiful hand-drawn illustrations and full-colour maps sit alongside the survey in this landmark publication. Whether you are an amateur or professional ornithologist or simply interested in the natural beauty of the Isle of Man, this long-awaited book provides a fascinating account of the Island's bird life.
