Phytogeography Of Northern Europe British Isles Fennoscandia And Adjacent Areas:

The Phytogeography of Northern Europe Eilif Dahl, 2007-04-23 Eilif Dahl who died in 1993 had one of the most original and creative minds in plant geography His approach went far beyond the description of distribution patterns and the establishment of correlations between distributions and particular climatic variables His understanding of physiological mechanisms that influenced and controlled the observed distributional patterns was a key feature of his numerous ideas and hypotheses He was also aware of the importance of history as an influence on present day plant distribution especially in arctic plants In The Phytogeography of Northern Europe Dahl brings to bear his wide range of interests in physics chemistry geology climatology meteorology and mathematics as well as plant ecology and plant systematics to analyze and explain the distribution of individual plant taxa across northwestern Europe This book will stand as a testament to the ideas and inspiration of a fine scientist

Encyclopedia of the World's Biomes, 2020-06-26 Encyclopedia of the World's Biomes is a unique five volume reference that provides a global synthesis of biomes including the latest science All of the book's chapters follow a common thematic order that spans biodiversity importance principal anthropogenic stressors and trends changing climatic conditions and conservation strategies for maintaining biomes in an increasingly human dominated world This work is a one stop shop that gives users access to up to date informative articles that go deeper in content than any currently available publication Offers students and researchers a one stop shop for information currently only available in scattered or non technical sources Authored and edited by top scientists in the field Concisely written to guide the reader though the topic Includes meaningful illustrations and suggests further reading for those needing more specific information

Alpine Biodiversity in Europe Laszlo Nagy, Georg Grabherr, Christian Körner, Desmond B.A. Thompson, 2012-12-06 The United Nations Conference on the Environment and Development UNCED held in Rio de Janeiro in 1992 spawned a multitude of programmes aimed at assessing managing and conserving the earth's biological diversity One important issue addressed at the conference was the mountain environment A specific feature of high mountains is the so called alpine zone i.e. the treeless regions at the uppermost reaches Though covering only a very small proportion of the land surface the alpine zone contains a relatively large number of plants animals fungi and microbes which are specifically adapted to cold environments This zone contributes fundamentally to the planet's biodiversity and provides many resources for mountain dwelling as well as lowland people However rapid and largely man made changes are affecting mountain ecosystems such as soil erosion losses of habitat and genetic diversity and climate change all of which have to be addressed As stated in the European Community Biodiversity Strategy the global scale of biodiversity reduction or losses and the interdependence of different species and ecosystems across national borders demands concerted international action Managing biodiversity in a rational and sustainable way needs basic knowledge on its qualitative and quantitative aspects at local regional and global scales This is particularly true for mountains which are distributed throughout the world and are indeed hot spots of biodiversity in absolute terms as well as relative to the surrounding lowlands

Climate and Hydrology of Mountain Areas Carmen de Jong, David N. Collins, Roberto Ranzi, 2005-06-17 A comprehensive overview of interaction of the major hydrological and meteorological processes in mountain areas ie Cryosphere and Climatic Change Snow Melt and Soil Water Run off and Floods Water fluxes and Water Balance Hydro meteorological Coupling and Modelling Each section will review recent research in the field and illustrate key interactions with case studies from mountainous regions in Europe The Americas and Central Asia

The Biology of Alpine Habitats, 2009-03-19 This book is unique in providing a global overview of alpine high mountain habitats that occur above the natural cold limited tree line describing the factors that have shaped them over both ecological and evolutionary timescales The broad geographic coverage helps synthesise common features whilst revealing differences in the world s major alpine systems from the Arctic to the Tropics The words barren and wasteland have often been applied to describe landscapes beyond the treeline However a closer look reveals a large diversity of habitats assemblages and individual taxa largely connected to topographic diversity within individual alpine regions The book considers habitat forming factors landforms energy and climate hydrology soils and vegetation individually as well as their composite impacts on habitat characteristics Evolution and population processes are examined in the context of the responsiveness resilience of alpine habitats to global change Finally a critical assessment of the potential impacts of climate change atmospheric pollutants and land use is made and related to the management and conservation options available for these unique habitats

Encyclopedia of Environmental Change John A Matthews, 2013-12-13 Accessibly written by a team of international authors the Encyclopedia of Environmental Change provides a gateway to the complex facts concepts techniques methodology and philosophy of environmental change This three volume set illustrates and examines topics within this dynamic and rapidly changing interdisciplinary field The encyclopedia includes all of the following aspects of environmental change Diverse evidence of environmental change including climate change and changes on land and in the oceans Underlying natural and anthropogenic causes and mechanisms Wide ranging local regional and global impacts from the polar regions to the tropics Responses of geo ecosystems and human environmental systems in the face of past present and future environmental change Approaches methodologies and techniques used for reconstructing dating monitoring modelling projecting and predicting change Social economic and political dimensions of environmental issues environmental conservation and management and environmental policy Over 4 000 entries explore the following key themes and more Conservation Demographic change Environmental management Environmental policy Environmental security Food security Glaciation Green Revolution Human impact on environment Industrialization Landuse change Military impacts on environment Mining and mining impacts Nuclear energy Pollution Renewable resources Solar energy Sustainability Tourism Trade Water resources Water security Wildlife conservation The comprehensive coverage of terminology includes layers of entries ranging from one line definitions to short essays making this an invaluable companion for any student of physical geography environmental geography or environmental sciences Climate Change, Ecology and Systematics Trevor R. Hodgkinson, Michael B. Jones, Stephen Waldren, John A. N. Parnell, 2011-04-28 Climate change has shaped life in the past and will continue to do so in the future Understanding the interactions between climate and biodiversity is a complex challenge to science With contributions from 60 key researchers this book examines the ongoing impact of climate change on the ecology and diversity of life on earth It discusses the latest research within the fields of ecology and systematics highlighting the increasing integration of their approaches and methods Topics covered include the influence of climate change on evolutionary and ecological processes such as adaptation migration speciation and extinction and the role of these processes in determining the diversity and biogeographic distribution of species and their populations This book ultimately illustrates the necessity for global conservation actions to mitigate the effects of climate change in a world that is already undergoing a biodiversity crisis of unprecedented scale Flora and Vegetation of the Czech Republic Milan Chytrý, Jiří Danihelka, Zdeněk Kaplan, Petr Pyšek, 2017-11-10 This book provides basic information on the botanical diversity in the Czech Republic and relates the patterns in flora and vegetation to environmental factors biogeographical history and human impact Focusing on vascular plants bryophytes and lichens it summarizes the data on taxonomic diversity and provides details of relict endemic rare alien and other biogeographically important species Main vegetation types are characterized in terms of their structure distribution ecology and dynamics emphasizing the long term vegetation changes since the late Pleistocene historical impact of humans on vegetation and current changes in vegetation including the impact of alien species Special attention is paid to the conservation of threatened plant species and their habitats and ecological restoration An account of the history of botanical research in this country is also provided The book is illustrated with numerous maps graphs and photographs of plant species and communities The book is an essential reference for any biogeographer botanist and plant ecologist who is working in Central Europe or is searching for both general and more specific information on this part of the world
