Medieval History Writing Cru:

Medieval History Writing and Crusading Ideology Tuomas M. S. Lehtonen, Kurt Villads Jensen, 2005 This book examines how the crusading ideology was formulated in medieval historiography and how the crusading movement affected Christianity and the world beyond The second main theme is the spread of the crusading movement to Northern Europe especially Scandinavia and the Baltic Sea area Northerners not only participated in the crusades in the Holy Land but also learned and were inspired to create and take part in a new crusading movement within the Baltic Sea region itself The relationship between the crusades to Jerusalem and those in the North must be of fundamental importance to understanding the dynamics that created history both locally and in a general European context but this relation itself has seldom been the object of thoroughgoing research on the contrary the considerable scholarship on both the North and the South has been pursued in isolation Divided into three parts this volume opens with the different forms of and reactions to the crusading ideology The importance of ideology as a driving motivation for the crusaders has again been recognised in international studies since the 1970s and its impact is also now felt in Scandinavian research environments The second part moves on to examine the crusading ideology and its impact upon society in a broader context through its relation to violence its portrayal of the enemies and its representations in the policy and construction of the Danish crown and royal mythology The Northern Crusades in the Baltic Sea region are discussed in the third part as seen through contemporary sources and modern historical writing This also includes dealing with some of the impacts of the Crusades in Russia and even farther east in Mongolia The essays in this section show how the general idea of crusading was applied to the Northern areas and frequently resembles in its details the Mediterranean crusades as well as demonstrate how Scandinavian scholars have often neglected this aspect in modern history writing

Making History with Manuscripts in Medieval and Early Modern Europe Johannes Junge Ruhland, 2025-06-02 This volume interrogates the role of the manuscript medium in conveying history to medieval and early modern readers The contributors adopt a capacious understanding of history to explore history writing in its materiality from a variety of methodological and disciplinary perspectives The core contentions of this book are that the material features of manuscripts helped shaping historical narratives and defining history conceptually and that therefore the makers of these manuscripts played an instrumental role in history writing alongside authors Ranging from the ninth to the sixteenth centuries and comprising materials from across Western Europe in Latin and the vernaculars the ten chapters of this volume uncover stakes and strategies tied to highly specific contexts such as late thirteenth century Corbie or fifteenth century Zurich yet partaking in a shared practice of history writing with manuscripts Manuscript makers made history through layout rewriting illumination compilation choice of script and annotation and conferred history writing its material dimension This volume therefore situates the writing of history in its material dimension and invites us to consider medieval and early modern historiography in its medium A Cumulative Bibliography of Medieval Military History and Technology, Update 2003-2006 Kelly DeVries, 2008-01-31 This is the second update of A Cumulative Bibliography of Medieval Military History and Technology which appeared in 2002 It is meant to do two things to present references to works on medieval military history and technology not included in the first two volumes and to present references to all books and articles published on medieval military history and technology from 2003 to 2006 These references are divided into the same categories as in the first two volumes and cover a chronological period of the same length from late antiquity to 1648 again in order to present a more complete picture of influences on and from the Middle Ages It also continues to cover the same geographical area as the first and second volume in essence Europe and the Middle East or again influences on and from this area The languages of these bibliographical references reflect this geography Doing Memory: Medieval Saints and Heroes and Their Afterlives in the Baltic Sea Region (19th-20th centuries)
