of NHS funding and the effectiveness of its workforce in large part determines the overall effectiveness of the health service. Workforce planning is the key means for the NHS to understand and anticipate the impact of demographic, technological and policy trends on future service requirements. However, workforce planning is also a challenging and complex issue in light of social and technological changes as well as the lengthy timescale involved in training staff at least three years for most health professions and up to twenty years for some senior doctors. The Committee's report examines the effectiveness of current workforce planning activities including clinical and managerial staff particularly in the light of reported deficits in NHS organisations and how it should be done in the future including the following issues: workforce developments since 1999; the impact of the European Working Time Directive and increasing international competition for staff; retention and recruitment issues; examples of good practice; how to ensure flexibility in system arrangements; and whether planning should be centralised or decentralised.
