Role Of Government In The Industrialization Of Iraq:

The Role of Government in the Industrialization of Iraq 1950-1965 Ferhang Jalal, 2015-05-08 Since 1950 the governments of Iraq have attempted vigorously to develop the economy and have stressed industrial development Here Dr Ferhang Jalal discusses analyses and appraises a number of policies adopted by the government of Iraq designed to promote the growth of the industrial sector The policies were of two kinds the establishment of enterprises financed constructed and operated by the government and the encouragement of the expansion of private industrial enterprises through provision of finance by way of tax exemptions of all kinds through controls over the allocation of investment and by protecting them from foreign competition The author discusses the extent to which investment programmes formulated by planners were able to be implemented and analyses in detail the factors facilitating and those constraining a more rapid rate of industrial growth

Role of Government in the Industrialization of Iraq, 1950-65 Farhang Jalāl, 1968 Role of Government in the Industrialization of Iraq, 1950-65 Farhang Jalāl, 1968 Iraq is a poor country with a per capita income of I D 76 0 212 per annum in 1965 She has underdeveloped resources and large supplies of foreign exchange from her oil exports She is not short of unskilled labour or land and excellent opportunities exist for development in agriculture Since 1950 the governments have attempted vigorously to develop the economy and have stressed probably incorrectly industry and industry has grown from 7 6% of national income in 1953 to 11 2% in 1963 at an annual average rate of 11 5% In this thesis I have discussed analysed and appraised a number of policies adopted by the government of Iraq designed to promote the growth of the industrial sector These policies were of two kinds i The establishment of enterprises financed constructed and operated by the government ii The encouragement of the expansion of private industrial enterprises by protecting them from foreign competition through the provision of finance by way of tax exemptions of all kinds and through controls over the allocation of investment This thesis shows that a key constraint on a more rapid rate of industrial growth and the long term development of a viable industrial structure has been the administrative bottleneck Thus central planners formulated investment programmes without regard to the capacity of government agencies to implement their plans Consequently only a fraction of funds available for industrialization plans was actually utilized Moreover because of the low quality and limited capacity of the administrative machinery in relation to the volume and complexity of tasks imposed on it tariff rates were determined haphazardly import prohibitions were determined without proper reference to economic principles tax exemptions were extended arbitrarily no proper steps were taken to provide industry with sufficient working capital and the government attempted to control the allocation of private investment by means of very restrictive and cumbersome procedures Consequently some of the designed incentives acted as impediments to private efforts

Arab Industrial Integration (RLE Economy of Middle East) Elias T. Ghantus,2020-09-10 The Arab countries are increasingly recognising their importance as a regional economic grouping Given the highly skewed distribution of natural human and financial resources the course of economic development in the Arab countries seems to be interrelated Through pooling their resources and markets these countries will not only be able to optimise investment decisions but also broaden the potential for development This book argues that economic integration is not merely a question of reducing or eliminating discriminatory measures as emphasised in previous integration attempts It calls rather for a positive action based on a regional investment strategy which coordinates production programmes to reap the benefits of specialisation and scale The book focuses on past industrialisation efforts in the Arab countries and examines the emerging patterns of industrial growth A pioneering attempt is made to identify specific industries whose economic viability can be enhanced by conceiving them on a regional basis The book concludes by framing a strategy for an integrated industrial development in the Arab region First published in 1982
