ordinary in his face his right eye was very slightly higher than his left and the left eyelid drooped a little which made his eyes look different strange and drowsy Tyeglev's countenance which was not however without a certain attractiveness almost always wore an expression of discontent mingled with perplexity as though he were chasing within himself a gloomy thought which he was never able to catch At the same time he did not give one the impression of being stuck up he might rather have been taken for an aggrieved than a haughty man He spoke very little hesitatingly in a husky voice with unnecessary repetitions Unlike most fatalists he did not use particularly elaborate expressions in speaking and only had recourse to them in writing his handwriting was quite like a child's His superiors regarded him as an officer of no great merit not particularly capable and not over zealous The brigadier general a man of German extraction used to say of him He has punctuality but not precision With the soldiers too Tyeglev had the character of being neither one thing nor the other He lived modestly in accordance with his means He had been left an orphan at nine years old his father and mother were drowned when they were being ferried across the Oka in the spring floods He had been educated at a private school where he had the reputation of being one of the slowest and quietest of the boys and at his own earnest desire and through the good offices of a cousin who was a man of influence he obtained a commission in the horse guards artillery and though with some difficulty passed his examination first as an ensign and then as a second lieutenant Daily Bread, and Other Stories, 1870
