racial culture

What is black culture? Does it have an essence? What do we lose and gain by assuming that it does, and by building our laws accordingly? This bold and provocative book questions a common assumption of political multiculturalism: that social categories such as race, ethnicity, gender, and sexuality are defined by distinctive cultural practices.

Richard Ford argues against law reform proposals that would attempt to apply civil rights protections to "cultural difference." Unlike many criticisms of multiculturalism, which worry about "reverse discrimination" or the erosion of core Western cultural values, the book's argument is primarily focused on the adverse effects of multicultural rhetoric and multicultural rights on their supposed beneficiaries.

In clear and compelling prose, Ford argues that multicultural accounts of cultural difference do not accurately describe the practices of social groups. Instead these accounts are prescriptive: they attempt to canonize a narrow, parochial, and contestable set of ideas about appropriate group culture and to discredit more cosmopolitan lifestyles, commitments, and values. Far from remedying discrimination and status hierarchy, "cultural rights" share the ideological presuppositions, and participate in the discursive and institutional practices, of racism, sexism, and homophobia.

This is a major contribution to our understanding of today's politics of race, by one of the most distinctive and important young voices in America's legal academy.

"Ford is deliberately provocative and his arguments are ingenious, often funny, and sometimes remarkably personal."

—The New Yorker

"A serious work of legal scholarship about race that's innovative, bracing and funny? Stanford law professor Ford pulls it off in a surprising, rigorous volume that should send academics, legal professionals, civil rights activists and others dedicated to social justice racing for both sides of the barricades. . . . Agree with it or not, this book is an invigorating pleasure for thoughtful readers."

—Publishers Weekly

RICHARD T. FORD is George E. Osborne Professor of Law at Stanford Law School. He has published in numerous legal journals including the Harvard Law Review and Stanford Law Review. He is co-author of Local Government Law and The Legal Geographies Reader.

Wheelock, 2015-12-08 In an interdisciplinary study of black intellectual history at the dawn of the nineteenth century Stefan M Wheelock shows how black antislavery writers were able to counteract ideologies of white supremacy while fostering a sense of racial community and identity The major figures he discusses Ottobah Cugoana Olaudah Equiano David Walker and Maria Stewart engaged the concepts of democracy freedom and equality as these ideas ripened within the context of racial terror and colonial hegemony Wheelock highlights the ways in which religious and secular versions of collective political destiny both competed and cooperated to forge a vision for a more perfect and just society By appealing to religious sensibilities and calling for emancipation these writers addressed slavery and its cultural bearing on the Atlantic in varied complex and sometimes contradictory ways during a key period in the development of Western political identity and modernity Multiculturalism Without Culture Anne Phillips, 2009-03-09 Multiculturalism without culture Between culture and cosmos What's wrong with cultural defence Autonomy coercion and constraint Exit and voice Multiculturalism without groups Asian Americans and the Spirit of Racial Capitalism Jonathan Tran, 2022 Any serious consideration of Asian American life forces us to reframe the way we talk about racism and antiracism There are two contemporary approaches to antiracist theory and practice The first emphasizes racial identity to the exclusion of political economy making racialized life in America illegible This approach s prevalence in the academy and beyond now rises to the level of established doctrine The second approach views racial identity as the function of a particular political economy what is called racial capitalism and therefore analytically subordinates racial identity to political economy Jonathan Tran develops arguments in favor of this second approach He does so by means of an extended analysis of two case studies a Chinese migrant settlement in the Mississippi Delta 1868 1969 and the Redeemer Community Church in the Bayview Hunters Point section of San Francisco 1969 present While his analysis is focused on particular groups and persons he uses it to examine more broadly racial capitalism s processes and commitments at the sites of their structural and systemic unfolding In pursuing a research agenda that pushes beyond the narrow confines of racial identity Tran reaches back to trusted modes of analysis that have been obscured by the prevailing antiracist orthodoxy and proposes reframing antiracism in terms of a theologically salient account of political economy

Kerker, 2003-12-11 John D Kerker's study examines the literary history of racial and national identity in nineteenth century America Kerker argues that writers such as DuBois Lanier Simms and Scott used poetic effects to assert the distinctiveness of certain groups in a diffuse social landscape Kerker explores poetry's formal properties its sound effects as they intersect with the issues of race and nation He shows how formal effects ranging from meter and rhythm to alliteration and melody provide these writers with evidence of a collective identity whether national or racial Through this shared reliance on formal literary effects national and racial identities Kerker shows are related elements of a single literary history This is the story of how poetic effects helped to define national identities in Anglo America as a step toward helping to define racial identities within the United States This highly original study will command a wide audience of Americanists

A Genealogy of Literary Multiculturalism Christopher Douglas, 2011-08-15 As an anthropology student studying with Franz Boas Zora Neale Hurston recorded African American folklore in rural central Florida studied hoodoo in New Orleans and voodoo in Haiti talked with the last ex slave to survive the Middle Passage and collected music from Jamaica Her ethnographic work would serve as the basis for her novels and other writings in which she shaped a vision of African American Southern rural folk culture articulated through an antiracist concept of culture championed by Boas culture as plural relative and long lived Meanwhile a very different antiracist model of culture learned from Robert Park's sociology allowed Richard Wright to imagine African American culture in terms of severed traditions marginal consciousness and generation gaps In A Genealogy of Literary Multiculturalism Christopher Douglas uncovers the largely unacknowledged role played by ideas from sociology and anthropology in nourishing the politics and forms of minority writers from diverse backgrounds Douglas divides the history of multicultural writing in the United States into three periods The first which spans the 1920s and 1930s features minority writers such as Hurston and D Arcy McNickle who were indebted to the work of Boas and his attempts to detach culture from race The second period from 1940 to the mid 1960s was a time of assimilation and integration as seen in the work of authors such as Richard Wright Jade Snow Wong John Okada and Ralph Ellison who were influenced by currents in sociological thought The third period focuses on the writers we associate with contemporary literary multiculturalism including Toni Morrison N Scott Momaday Frank Chin Ishmael Reed and Gloria Anzald a Douglas shows that these more recent writers advocated a literary nationalism that was based on a modified Boasian anthropology and that laid the pluralist grounds for our current conception of literary multiculturalism

Ultimately Douglas s unified field theory of multicultural literature brings together divergent African American Asian American Mexican American and Native American literary traditions into one story of how we moved from thinking about groups as races to thinking about groups as cultures and then back again      Critical Race Consciousness Gary Peller,2015-10-23 Despite the apparent racial progress reflected in Obama s election the African American community in the United States is in a deep crisis on many fronts economic intellectual cultural and spiritual This book sets out to trace the ideological roots of this crisis Challenging the conventional historical narrative of race in America Peller contends that the structure of contemporary racial discourse was set in the confrontation between liberal integrationism and black nationalism during the 1960s and 1970s Arguing that the ideology of integration that emerged was highly conservative apologetic and harmful to the African American community this book is sure to provide a new lens for studying and learning from American race relations in the twentieth century      Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture Jennifer Ann Ho,2015-05-12 The sheer diversity of the Asian American populace makes them an ambiguous racial category Indeed the 2010 U S Census lists twenty four Asian ethnic groups lumping together under one heading people with dramatically different historical backgrounds and cultures In Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture Jennifer Ann Ho shines a light on the hybrid and indeterminate aspects of race revealing ambiguity to be paramount to a more nuanced understanding both of race and of what it means to be Asian American Exploring a variety of subjects and cultural artifacts Ho reveals how Asian American subjects evince a deep racial ambiguity that unmoors the concept of race from any fixed or finite understanding For example the book examines the racial ambiguity of Japanese American nisei Yoshiko Nakamura deLeon who during World War II underwent an abrupt transition from being an enemy alien to an assimilating American via the Mixed Marriage Policy of 1942 It looks at the blogs of Korean Taiwanese and Vietnamese Americans who were adopted as children by white American families and have conflicted feelings about their honorary white status And it discusses Tiger Woods the most famous mixed race Asian American whose description of himself as Cablinasian reflecting his background as Black Asian Caucasian and Native American perfectly captures the ambiguity of racial classifications Race is an abstraction that we treat as concrete a construct that reflects only our desires fears and anxieties Jennifer Ho demonstrates in Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture that seeing race as ambiguous puts us one step closer to a potential antidote to racism      The Right to Exclude Justin Desautels-Stein,2023-02-12 In a world in which racism and xenophobia are endemic what is the role of international law To the extent international rules are thought to have any relevance at all the typical approach characterizes international law as on the side of racial justice Human rights instruments like the United Nations International Convention on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination are paradigmatic offering the world international agreements in which governments are directed to avoid racist behavior and promote antiracist action In The Right to Exclude Justin Desautels Stein goes against the grain and asks whether certain rules of international law might actually produce structures of racial hierarchy rather than work to limit them The intellectual fulcrum for this production Desautels Stein argues lies in the ideological structures of sovereignty and property the right to exclude that is shared in those twinned precincts and the border regimes that result Applying critical race theory to contemporary problems of migration nationalism multiculturalism decolonization and self determination Desautels Stein expounds a theory of postracial xenophobia a structure of racial ideology that justifies and legitimates a pragmatic account of racialized foreignness a racial xenos      Left Legalism/Left Critique Wendy Brown, Janet Halley, 2002-11-22 A reader aimed at revitalizing left legal and political critique      A Companion to American Literature and Culture Paul Lauter, 2020-09-21 This expansive Companion offers a set of fresh perspectives on the wealth of texts produced in and around what is now the United States Highlights the diverse voices that constitute American literature embracing oral traditions slave narratives regional writing literature of the environment and more Demonstrates that American literature was multicultural before Europeans arrived on the continent and even more so thereafter Offers three distinct paradigms for thinking about American literature focusing on genealogies of American literary study writers and issues and contemporary theories and practices Enables students and researchers to generate richer more varied and more comprehensive readings of American literature      Racism, Culture, Markets John Gabriel, 2012-11-12 Racism Culture Markets explores the connections between cultural representations of race and their historical institutional and global forms of expression and impact John Gabriel examines the current fixation with market place philosophies in terms of the crisis in anti racist politics and concern over questions of cultural identity He explores issues such as the continuing relevance of terms like black as a basis for self definition the need to think about identities in more fluid and complex ways and the need to develop a much more explicit discussion of the construction of whiteness and white identities Racism Culture Markets brings together a range of historical and contemporary case studies including the Rushdie affair the Gulf War debates around fostering adoption and domestic violence separate schooling the service economy and its employment practices tourism in the Third World the Bhopal chemical disaster and racism in the new Europe His case studies also consider the role played by contemporary media and popular culture in these debates including film television music and the press
