Food, Medicine, and the Quest for Good

Health Nancy N. Chen, 2009 What we eat how we eat where we eat and when we eat are deeply embedded cultural practices Eating is also related to how we medicate The multimillion dollar diet industry offers advice on how to eat for a better body and longer life and avoiding harmful foods or choosing healthy ones is considered separate from consuming medicine another multimillion dollar industry In contrast most traditional medical systems view food as inseparable from medicine and regard medicinal foods as the front line of healing Drawing on medical texts and food therapy practices from around the world and throughout history Nancy N Chen locates old and new crossovers between food and medicine in different social and cultural contexts The consumption of spices sugar and salt was once linked to specific healing properties and trade in these commodities transformed not just the political economy of Europe Asia and the New World but local tastes and food practices as well Today's technologies are rapidly changing traditional attitudes toward food enabling the cultivation of new admixtures such as nutraceuticals and genetically modified food that link food to medicine in novel ways Chen considers these developments against the evolving food regimes of the diet industry in order to build a framework for understanding diet as individual practice social prescription and political formation

Expanding the Production and Use of Cool Season Food Legumes Fred J. Muehlbauer, W.J. Kaiser, 2012-12-06 The goal of the Second International Food Legume Research Conference held in Cairo Egypt was to build on the success of the first conference held nearly 6 years earlier at Spokane Washington USA It was at that first conference where the decision was made to hold the second Conference in Egypt and so near the ancestral home of these food legume crops It has been a long held view that the cool season food legumes had their origin in the Mediterranean basin and the Near east arc and there is little doubt that food legumes were a staple food of the ancient Egyptian civilization The cool season food legumes have the reputation for producing at least some yield under adverse conditions of poor fertility and limited moisture i e in circumstances where other crops are likely to fail completely Yields of cool season food legumes are particularly poor in those regions where they are most important to local populations The influx of more profitable crops such as wheat maize and soybeans have gradually relegated the food legumes to marginal areas with poor fertility and limited water which exposes them to even greater degrees of stress In the past two decades production of food legumes has declined in most of the developing countries while at the same time it has expanded greatly in Canada Australia and most notably in Turkey
