

War Communism

War Communism was a new economic policy introduced by Lenin to ensure food supplies to the army.

- All large factories were taken over by the government.
- Production was planned and organised by the government.
- Discipline for workers was strict and strikers could be shot.
- Peasants had to hand over surplus food to the government. If they didn't they could be shot.
- Food was rationed. Could only get a ration card if you were working.
- Free enterprise (private trade) became illegal – all production and trade was controlled by the state.
- Money became worthless – wages ended up being paid in food.
