Taste of Power is an investigation of the crucial role culinary texts and practices played in the making of cultural identities and social hierarchies since the founding of the United States. Nutritional advice and representations of food and eating including cookbooks, literature, magazines, newspapers, still life paintings, television shows, films, and the internet have helped throughout American history to circulate normative claims about citizenship, gender, performance, sexuality, class, privilege, race, and ethnicity while promising an increase in cultural capital and social mobility to those who comply with the prescribed norms. The study examines culinary writing and practices as forces for the production of social order and at the same time as points of cultural resistance against hegemonic norms, especially in shaping dominant ideas of nationalism, gender, and sexuality, suggesting that eating right is a gateway to becoming an American, a good citizen, an ideal man, or a perfect mother. Cookbooks as a low prestige literary form became the largely unheralded vehicles for women to participate in nation building before they had access to the vote or public office for middle class authors to assert their class privileges for men to claim superiority over women even in the kitchen and for Lesbian authors to reinscribe themselves into the heteronormative economy of culinary culture. The book engages in close reading of a wide variety of sources and genres to uncover the intersections of food, politics, and privilege in American culture. Provided by publisher

Aesthetic Pleasure in Twentieth-Century Women's Food Writing Alice McLean, 2012-05-22 This book explores the aesthetic pleasures of eating and writing in the lives of M. F. K. Fisher 1908-1992, Alice B. Toklas 1877-1967, and Elizabeth David 1913-1992. Growing up during a time when women's food writing was largely limited to the domestic cookbook which helped to codify the guidelines of middle class domesticity, Fisher, Toklas, and David claimed the pleasures of gastronomy previously reserved for men. Articulating a language through which female desire is artfully and publicly sated, Fisher, Toklas, and David expanded women's food writing beyond the domestic realm by pioneering forms of self-expression that celebrate female appetite for pleasure and for culinary adventure. In so doing, they illuminate the power of genre-bending food writing to transgress and reconfigure conventional gender ideologies. For these women, food encouraged a sensory engagement with their environment and a physical receptivity toward pleasure that engendered their creative aesthetic.

Cooking in America, 1840-1945 Alice L. McLean, 2006-08-30 This cookbook covers the years 1840 through 1945, a time during which American cookery underwent a full scale revolution. Gas and electric stoves replaced hearth cookery. Milk products came from commercial dairy farms rather than the family cow. Daily meals were no longer bound by seasons and regions as canned, bottled, and eventually frozen products flooded the market and trains began to transport produce and meat from one end of the country to the other. During two World Wars and the Great Depression, women entered the work force in unprecedented numbers and household servants abandoned low paying domestic jobs to work in factories. As a result of these monumental changes, American home cooking became irrevocably simplified and cookery skills geared more toward juggling time to comb grocery store shelves for the best and most economical products than toward butchering and preserving an entire animal carcass or pickling fruits and vegetables This cookbook reflects these changes with each of the three chapters capturing the home cooking that typified the era The first chapter covers the pre industrial period 1840 to 1875 during this time home cooks knew how to broil roast grill fry and boil on an open hearth flame and its embers without getting severely injured They also handled whole sheep carcasses made gelatin from boiled pigs trotters grew their own yeast and prepared their own preserves The second chapter covers 1876 through 1910 a time when rapid urbanization transformed the United States from an agrarian society into an industrial giant giving rise to food corporations such as Armour Swift Campbell s Heinz and Pillsbury The mass production and mass marketing of commercial foods began to transform home cooking meat could be purchased from a local butcher or grocery store and commercial gelatin became widely available While many cooks still made their own pickles and preserves commercial varieties multiplied From 1910 to 1945 the period covered by Chapter 3 the home cook became a full fledged consumer and the national food supply became standardized to a large extent As the industrialization of the American food supply progressed commercially produced breads pastries sauces pickles and preserves began to take over kitchen cupboards and undermine the home cooks ability to produce their own meals from scratch The recipes have been culled from some of the most popular commercial and community cookbooks of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries Taken together the more than 300 recipes reflect the major cookbook trends of the era Suggested menus are provided for replicating entire meals

Cooking Lessons Sherrie A. Inness, 2001-08-07 Meatloaf fried chicken Jell O cake because foods are so very common we rarely think about them much in depth The authors of Cooking Lessons however believe that food is deserving of our critical scrutiny and that such analysis yields many important lessons about American society and its values This book explores the relationship between food and gender Contributors draw from diverse sources both contemporary and historical and look at women from various cultural backgrounds including Hispanic traditional southern White and African American Each chapter focuses on a certain food teasing out its cultural meanings and showing its effect on women s identity and lives For example food has often offered women a traditional way to gain power and influence in their households and larger communities For women without access to other forms of creative expression preparing a superior cake or batch of fried chicken was a traditional way to display their talent in an acceptable venue On the other hand foods and the stereotypes attached to them have also been used to keep women and men too from different races ethnicities and social classes in their place
