life and death transformed war captives into chattel slaves The power to kill defined both war and slavery But bringing war captives into enslavers private households was a dangerous proposition and so a parallel domestication ideology emerged calling for limitations on the power of enslavers and the recognition of the enslaved as persons held to labor in a variant of English servitude The Household War examines how the tensions between war slavery and domestication ideologies along with crucial political economic and cultural differences shaped the development of slavery in Virginia and Massachusetts from their founding through 1729 creating distinct systems of bondage in England's flagship mainland colonies In Massachusetts where a diversified and dynamic commercial economy afforded opportunities for mobility and access to material resources the dominance of domestication ideology enabled enslaved people to negotiate their bondage attain free status and build free Black households and communities Virginia however committed itself to war slavery early in its development with enslaved people defined as articles of property subject to enslavers power of life and death while the extreme inequality of plantation society made free Black household formation nearly impossible Long before American independence highlighted their differences then Massachusetts and Virginia were already on distinct trajectories laying the foundation for a future house divided on the question of slavery
